2 CIO Unions Kicked Out; Skids Oiled For 9 More

Cleveland, Nov. 2 (AP).—Two left-wing unions were kicked out at the CIO convention today and the union's executive board was given sweeping "instructions" to oust 9 or 10 others.

The first to be expelled since the CIO came into being 14 years ago were the United Electrical Workers—the CIO's third largest—and the Farm Equipment Workers.

Then the convention pushed through a special resolution aimed at covering left-wing affiliates.

The resolution "instructed" the CIO's 51-man executive board "immediately to exercise its powers . . . to take appropriate action to protect the CIO" from persons following the line of "the Communist Party, any Fascist organization or other totalitarian movement."

Affiliate Chartered

A right-wing affiliate immediately was chartered to take the place of the ousted electrical workers' union.

In an effort to capture the UE's 375,000 members, the executive board chartered the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers at a special meeting between convention sessions.

The new right-wing affiliate will hold an organizational convention in Philadelphia beginning November 28. James B. Carey will head the group, but will retain his post as CIO secretary-treasurer.

The UE expulsion is expected to touch off a bitter jurisdictional fight. Only the right-wing Auto Workers and the Steelworkers have larger memberships than the UE.

Constitutional amendments were adopted that are aimed at financing organization in the fields of unions cut loose from the CIO. The amendments boosted per capita taxes to the CIO from 8 cents per member per month to 10 cents monthly for the next year. This is expected to raise an additional one million dollars.

Three Other Changes

Three other important constitutional changes were approved.

Police Seize $30,000-a-Day 'Book' Suspect

An alleged bookmaker who police said did a $30,000-a-day business was arrested by Vice Squad detectives yesterday in a third-floor apartment at the Blair Apartments, 1321 M st. nw.

He was identified by Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the Vice Squad, as Wallace Beach, 38, former husband of Carmen Beach, the Spanish rhumba dancer who was convicted here in 1943 on white slave charges.

Beach

Inside Beach's apartment, Blick said, detectives found $6300 in cash, $800 in checks, a quantity of numbers slips and 400 pairs of dice.

Blick said his men went to the apartment yesterday afternoon because several complaints had been received. The detectives knocked on the front door, Beach opened it and then invited them in, Blick said.

The Vice Squad chief said Beach apparently was startled when he found the detectives at his door, but he then told them:

"Well, as long as you're here, come on in."

Blick said Beach told the detectives he had opened the door because he was expecting someone. He said Beach told them also

P-38 Had New Radio, Bolivian Major Says

Hearings to Be Begun Into Midair Collision

A new radio had been installed over the weekend in the Bolivian P-38 plane that collided with a DC-4 airliner Tuesday, killing 55 persons, Maj. German Pol, an eyewitness and friend of the injured fighter pilot, said yesterday.

The Bolivian air force major, in Washington on business for his government, told a reporter that two ground tests of the plane before its fatal flight prompted the pilot, Erick Rios Bridoux, to ask for specific repairs.

"He was not satisfied with the radio when he tested it Friday," Pol said, "so a new one was installed."

"The second time he tested the P-38, there was oil leaking from the left engine, and that was fixed," Pol added.

"The third time he tested the plane on the ground, he was satisfied and took it up."

About 10 minutes later, the P-38 and DC-4 collided in midair, about 300 feet above Mount Vernon Memorial hwy. and less than a mile from the National Airport runway.

Whether Bridoux's radio was operating properly was a source of speculation in early reports of the crash.

Tower operators said they frantically ordered him to "turn left" when a collision seemed imminent, but that their warnings went unheeded.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday exonerated Eastern Air Lines from blame in the Nation's worst air disaster, on the basis of a preliminary investigation.

Of the 55 known dead in the midair collision Tuesday between a DC-4 and a P-38 fighter plane, 52 bodies had been recovered last night. Fifty were positively identified.

D. W. Rentzel, administrator of Civil Aeronautics, issued a statement last night saying the DC-4 passenger liner "was operating in conformity with all the safety rules."

The crash was "beyond the control of the carrier (Eastern) or its personnel," Rentzel said, as the Civil Aeronautics Board proceeded with a thorough investigation of the collision between the liner and the Bolivian-purchased fighter plane near National Airport.

Neither Tuesday's crash nor one in which 15 aboard an Eastern plane were killed July 30, when a liner was "buzzed" by a Navy fighter plane in New Jersey, "reflects in any way upon the operations of the airlines, their pilots or their aircraft," Rentzel said.

Meanwhile, the CAB, empowered by law to subpena witnesses in probing air disasters, put one of its ranking members in charge of an investigation of the tragedy.

At 5:15 p. m., the jagged wreckage of the forward half of the four-engined death plane yielded only fragments of bodies and clothing as it was hauled out of the Potomac River.

Divers continued to probe the muddy, 30-foot depth of the Potomac last night in search of 3 bodies unaccounted for, when the crumpled mass of metal was moved downstream to the Naval Gun Factory by barge.

Aviation officials began a meticulous probe of the tragedy yesterday morning at a conference at National Airport.

Afterwards, it was announced that Harold A. Jones, a member of the CAB and World War I fighter pilot, would head the Government's inquiry panel.

CAB Chairman Joseph J. O'Connell, jr., said the investigators will take a formal statement from the only survivor of the collision as soon as doctors permit.

He is Erick Rios Bridoux, 29-year-old director of Bolivia's Civil

Army, Navy Top Chest Drive Quotas

Yesterday was National Defense Report Day in the Community Chest Federation's 1950 campaign.

Talk about unification!

The Army went over the top with 102.17 percent of its $134,821 goal. A total of $137,742 has been subscribed by Army personnel.

The Navy did likewise, with 100.1 percent of its goal, and contributions of $106,135.24.

The Air Force didn't quite make it—84 per cent of its $61,900 goal was reported.

But William A. Kelly, special assistant to Defense Secretary Louis A. Johnson, said it wasn't all the Air Force's fault. "The Secretary's office is a little bit behind," he explained.

Chest officials were more than a little encouraged by the report meeting. In the first three days of reports on the 1950 campaign, the Community Chest campaigners have reached 44.11 percent of the $3,991,719 goal. So far, the solicitors have raised $1,760,745, with the campaign steaming full speed ahead.

Workers at yesterday's luncheon in the Hall of Nations of the Washington Hotel got a special treat when 7-year-old Marcia Lee Yuter, 1812 Brisbane st., Silver Spring, Md., stood on tiptoe to reach the microphone and told how she had used one Community Chest agency.

It was the Jewish Community Center, where, since she was 4, Marcia has been going to learn dra-ma-tics, how to speak co-rrectly, and how to "breathe through our di-a-phraghms." To one and all, Marcia said, "Thank you for all the children of the Community Chest centers in Washington."

Kelly, who addressed the luncheon meeting, said that the tragedy of Tuesday's airliner collision near Washington had brought home to him "with full force" a dramatic instance of how publicly supported agencies are helping when needed. He said Salvation Army personnel were on the scene, as were members of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad, which receives all its support by public contribution.

Kelly told those at the luncheon that the National Defense Department as a whole is now within 94.5 percent of reaching its $328,963 goal in the campaign, with contributions so far of $310,512.07.

Pair Robs Area Bank Of $13,468

Two men robbed the East Falls Church Bank of $13,468 yesterday in a holdup which contained some of the elements of an early Mack Sennett comedy.

But it wasn't funny to the bank officials. Nor to the serious-faced FBI agents who swiftly moved into the hunt for the clown bandits.

One of the bandits wore a false mustache. When they made their getaway they dumped gallon jars of oil and handfuls of roofing nails at three sharp curves to foil pursuers.

Escape Car a Question

Witnesses weren't sure whether the bandits fled in a red pickup truck or a 1942 black Hudson.

At 7 p. m. last night Arlington police picked up the abandoned getaway car—a black 1947 Buick it turned out—at 26th and N. Glebe rd. A license tag dropped at the scene of the robbery matched one found on the Buick, police said.

County Detective John Sanders said the robbers had switched to a blue 1942 Hudson with Michigan tags reported stolen in the District.

The robbery occurred at about 9:30 a. m. The bank, which is on Lee hwy. near N. Washington blvd., just over the line in Arlington County, had only been open for business about 30 minutes.

The bank's cashier, Mrs. Beatrice Catte, was in the cashier's cage. In the bank were two customers, John E. McMillan of 6885 N. Fairfax dr., a filling station operator, and Dr. Malcolm Ware, a retired druggist, of 108 Jefferson st.

Customer Cautions Gunman

When the bandits entered, each armed with a .45-caliber Colt automatic, one took up a post just inside the door. His companion drifted over toward the counter.

Dr. Ware, whose hobby is collecting guns, turned from the cashier's cage and approached the gunman near the door. He immediately recognized the weapon as a .45 Colt.

"I thought," he said later, "that it was somebody wanting to trade me or sell me a gun. Everybody knows I collect guns."

So Dr. Ware remarked matter-of-factly to the bandit: "You shouldn't hold your gun cocked that way—it's dangerous."

"A Stickup," Witness Told

The bandit immediately set Dr. Ware straight. "This," he announced sharply, "is a stickup. Get over there by the cashier's cage."

The second bandit pocketed his

Hanratty Child Discovered 2 Miles From Home at Railroad

Seven-year-old Claire Marie Hanratty was found unharmed at 1 a. m. today two miles from her home in Seabrook, Md., after more than 900 persons had searched for her 10 hours.

Richard Gardner, a Riverdale Heights fireman, one of a group of 50 that had fanned out over an area near the Ardmore crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad, discovered the little girl beside the 50-foot embankment, three quarters of a mile from Lanham Station rd.

He heard a call: "Who is that?"

"Me, honey," Gardner answered.

"Is my mommy there?"

"No, but I'll take you to her."

When he reached the child she wanted to know:

"Are you a fireman? Where's the fire?"

Rushed to Headquarters

Gardner and his fellow searchers put Claire in an ambulance and she was rushed back to the headquarters of the search in the Lanham Elementary School. There the crowd of 150 which had been aiding in the hunt formed a double line, through which the girl wrapped in a blanket was carried into the school where her mother, Mrs. Robert Hanratty, was waiting.

"My baby," cried Mrs. Hanratty, and took the child in her arms, sobbing.

Claire was apparently all right, except for a smudge on one cheek. She asked her mother for a cookie, in almost her first words. There was no indication that she was suffering from anything more than hunger, but the girl was taken to the Prince Georges General Hospital for a precautionary checkup.

Took Wrong Bus

Claire was last seen by four of her mates at the Lanham School boarding a school bus at 3 p .m. yesterday. It turned out she took the West Lanham Hills bus, instead of the Lanham bus. She walked about 3 miles after leaving the bus.

When the girl failed to return home at 4 p. m. her mother went to the school but found nobody there. Then she notified police.

Dr. Seckinger Is Named D. C. Health Chief

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, No. 2 man in the District Health Department for the past 14 years, yesterday was named Health Officer to succeed Dr. George C. Ruhland.

The 55-year-old Seckinger will be sworn in today at 10 a. m. in the office of Commissioner John Russell Young. Seckinger lives at 4923 Sedgwick st. nw. with his wife and son.

The appointment was announced shortly after Young conferred with Commissioner Guy Mason at the latter's home. Mason has been confined to his home by illness for three weeks.

Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Young, said Mason, the Commissioner in charge of the Health Department, had urged Seckinger's appointment. The other two Commissioners concurred.

Dr. Ruhland, who retired September 30, had also recommended Seckinger's appointment. Ruhland yesterday said he was "very much pleased" by Seckinger's selection, calling it "good sense to capitalize on his experience."

Seckinger's name was one of three submitted to the Commissioners last week

The committee recommended, in order of preference: Dr. Vlado A. Getting, Massachusetts Commissioner of Health; Dr. Irwin C. Sage, assistant health officer of San Francisco, and Seckinger.

Both Getting and Sage had indicated they would be interested only if the job paid the $14,500 requested in next year's budget. Stofberg said the Commissioner felt these stipulations "could not be overlooked."

District budget officials said under the new Classification Act Seckinger will receive $10,000 a year—$500 less than he would have received had he been appoint-

Without Unity, Hoffman Sees A 'Dark Age'

By Kenyan Kilbon

Paris, Nov. 2 (NYHT).—Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Cooperation Administrator, today told western European countries failure to move during the next few months toward creation of a single market may bring on "a new kind of Dark Age in the world."

This warning, underlining Hoffman's call Monday for an early program of economic integration in western Europe, was delivered to the Council of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation immediately after its passage of a six-point resolution aimed principally at cutting down intra-European trade barriers.

The major attack was against restrictions on the countries' imports from one another. The resolution called on all OEEC members to remove such quota barriers by December 15 on at least 50 percent of their total private imports—as opposed to import trade handled by monopolies under government control.

New Method of Dividing

The decision, fruit of a three-day council meeting, dealt in a somewhat gingerly fashion with Hoffman's demand for unity. It recognized in a preamble the need for a single large market in Europe, but emphasized the necessity of getting there by stages rather than all at once.

The council approved also a new method of dividing American aid for the final two years of the Marshall Plan.

Instead of going again through the troublesome process of allocating funds on the basis of individual requests, OEEC will ask the ECA to divide the money in the proportions governing their distribution under the current 1949-50 program. These will be 75 percent of dollar aid and 60 percent of European currency aid.

The portion of the resolution

Indonesian Sovereignty Is Assured By Dutch

The Hague, Nov. 2 (AP).—Dutch Indonesian agreements on a United States of Indonesia were signed today, giving promise of peace and independence to millions of Asiatics governed by the Dutch since 1602.

Representatives of the Netherlands and of 70 million Indonesians, meeting in historic Knights Hall, scratched their signatures to agreements which extend equal partnership to the new state in a tight union with the Dutch. Queen Juliana and her successors will stand as the symbol of union.

The Dutch agreed "unconditionally and irrevocably" to transfer complete sovereignty to the young republic not later than December 30, provided the Dutch and Indonesian Parliaments approve. Both are expected to do so, but the vote may be close.

Vote Within Six Weeks

They must vote within six weeks.

Dutch Prime Minister Dr. Willem Drees, one of the signers, said he was confident of parliamentary ratification by the necessary two-thirds vote. He promised Dutch aid to the new state.

The proposed union gives Indonesia a position similar to a dominion in the British Commonwealth. But trade, military, foreign relations and cultural agreements signed today leave her more closely tied to the Dutch apron strings than are the dominions to Britain.

The Dutch promised to back the new state for membership in the United Nations.

It was hoped emergence of the republic will silence the guns of revolution, which have stirred the islands since the end of World War II.

Trade Flow Anticipated

The statute creating the union provides for withdrawal of all Dutch forces within the first six months of next year, if shipping permits.

A one-year limit was set for withdrawal of the Dutch navy. The great naval base at Soerabaja, Java, will remain provisionally under the Dutch. When Indonesia finally emerges as completely independent the base will have a Dutch commander responsible to the Indonesian government under the Indonesian flag.

The partners will maintain their own foreign relations and define their own foreign policies, but will try to coordinate them.

The fledgling government will shoulder a debt of 4,300,000,000 guilders ($1,132,000,000). But it will not have to repay its external debt to the Netherlands.

Its official name will be "Republika Indonesia Serjkat," which means "Republic of the United States of Indonesia." Its capital will be in Batavia, Java.

Complete responsibility for defense and security will be in its own hands, with the possibility of an assist from the Dutch if need be.

Cessation of hostilities is expected to unleash a flood of wealth from the southeast Asian islands. The fighting has frozen exploitation of the islands' resources—rub-

Stocks Gain Total of $1 Billion In 2-Day Rise

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—A billion dollar gain was marked up today on the stock market for the two days since announcement of the ending of the strike at the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The general stock list stood at its highest mark since November 1, 1948. Trading on the New York Stock Exchange showed the biggest gains today since September 21, 10 days before the steel strike began. Utility stocks were at their best since August 30, 1946.

There was heavy trading today with more than 1,500,000 shares changing hands. Gains ranged from fractions to 2 points among the leading stocks. Such "blue chip" stocks as Allied Chemical, Standard Oil, Chrysler and Proctor & Gamble all rose.

Look for Ballot Sunday

Post Straw Vote to Record Public Attitude on Bus Radio

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Washington area residents will be given an opportunity Sunday to cast unofficial votes for or against radio broadcasts in local streetcars and buses.

The Washington Post on that day will print a simple ballot to give residents their chance to vote "yes" or "no" to the question: "Do you favor radio broadcasts in streetcars and buses in Washington?"

The unofficial poll of public sentiment will be taken while the District Public Utilities Commission considers its eventual decision on radio broadcasts in the vehicles of the Capital Transit Co.

The PUC hearing on this issue, just concluded, ran through four days of pro-and-con testimony, some of it the bitterest ever heard by local officials in any recent District hearings.

Attorneys who intervened on the side of the opponents of transit radio were given 10 days to file briefs, and attorneys representing the transit firm and the radio firms concerned were given an additional 10 days to reply. Thus the PUC decision could be delayed three weeks or more, or it could come sooner if the brief-writers do not use up their allotted time.

As presented in the PUC hearing, opinions ran to extremes.

There was the group that felt the sweet mechanized chariots of

512–142 for Rev. Docherty

New York Ave. Presbyterians Vote to Summon Scots Pastor

After hearing impassioned addresses by a high school girl, a Danish Embassy official and 10 others, the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church last night voted to extend a call to the Rev. George M. Docherty of Aberdeen, Scotland.

The balloting resulted in a 512-to-142 vote—3.1 percent more than the required 75 percent affirmation. On October 19 the congregation voted 391-167 for the Scotsman—then this ballot was declared "illegal because of inaccuracy."

Only two speakers opposed Rev. Docherty last night — Charles G. Stott, trustee, and one of the eight dissenters from the 24-majority of the committee on pastor which had recommended the call, and Judge J. Russell Leech, of the United States Tax Court. They maintained Mr. Docherty admitted voting Socialist in the last British election, and was therefore suspect as a Socialist. Also that an American should be preferred to a Scotsman.

One reply came from Katherine Murray, 15-year-old choir girl and Central High junior:

"Do you remember a picture of Jesus Christ that they used to show when you were in Sunday school?" she asked. "On each side of Him were children of every nationality, race, creed and color.

"He didn't distinguish between people because of their nationality . . . Anyway how many of you can say you are true Americans? How many of you can say you are Navajos?

'Misinterpreted'

Army Racial Policy Order Amended

Army officials said yesterday they would amend a recent order which was widely interpreted as nullifying the main provisions of the new Army program for greater racial equality in the ranks.

Negro officials considered the October 27 order as upsetting the new policy announced a month ago by Army Secretary Gordon Gray. They viewed it as an effort to backtrack on the program and particularly objected to a phrase which appeared to set up "Negro spaces" in housekeeping or "overhead" units at Army posts.

The new policy continued segregated troop units but allowed integrated housekeeping forces, and opened all Army schools and military specialties to Negroes.

An October 27 message to all commands, signed by Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsall, Adjutant General of the Army, referred to a provision of the earlier order reading that "military occupational specialties will be open to qualified personnel without regard to race or color."

"It is not intended that paragraph 1-a of the above message be interpreted to authorize assignments to troops basic spaces without regard to race or color," said the October 27 message. "Negro personnel will be assigned only to table of organization and equipment (troop) units authorized Negro personnel, and to Negro spaces in table of distribution (housekeeping) units."

Army personnel officials said however, that the above order had been "misinterpreted," that no backtracking on the Gray policy was intended. They said that to clarify the situation the latter sentence would be rescinded and that it be specifically stated instead that "Negro personnel may be assigned to spaces in any table of distribution unit."

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Admiral Forrest Percival Sherman, sworn in yesterday as Chief of Naval Operations, called upon Navy men everywhere to give him their full support in the "difficult" job ahead.

The 53-year-old naval aviator reeeived a handshake and "good luck" wish from the man he succeeds—Admiral Louis E. Denfeld—who was deposed by President Truman as an aftermath of the bitter unification row.

At a meeting with top admirals after the ceremony, Sherman is said to have told them he wanted "everyone to stay." He also asked Vice Admiral John Dale Price, vice chief of naval operations, to remain in his post until the 1951 budget is out of the way—probably next spring.

Price, a flier, is due for transfer under a policy which holds that when the CNO is an aviator, the No. 2 man must be a surface officer, and vice versa.

It was also revealed that Rear Admiral John G. Ballentine, now a member of the Navy General Board, will replace Sherman as commander of the Sixth Task Fleet in the Mediterranean.

Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, in whose office the change-over ceremony occurred, took the occasion to issue a veiled warning that naval officers must put loyalty to the Nation above loyalty to the Navy.

Earlier, Matthews announced he had offered Admiral Denfeld the post of commander of naval forces in eastern European and Mediterranean waters—as reported in this newspaper yesterday morning.

Begins Two Months Leave

Denfeld has neither dcelined nor accepted the assignment. Today he starts on two months leave during which he will make up his mind whether to take the post or retire.

An aide quoted the admiral as saying he will go to his home in Westboro, Mass., "put on old clothes, putter around the place and think."

Some of Denfeld's friends have been urging him to retire and run for Congress to carry on his fight. During recent congressional hearings, he charged that current Department of Defense war planning is unsound and that the Navy is not getting a square deal from top Pentagon and Administration chiefs.

Many at Ceremony

Sherman, one of the framers of the Unification Act who stayed out of the recent controversy, took the oath of office before two-score admirals and dozens of lesser officers.

He thanked them for coming to see him take on his difficult responsibilities, and added that his task "can only be accomplished with the help and support of the officers here and the officers who are not here." Sherman added that he knew he could count on that support.

Then the new Navy chief thanked Denfeld for his assistance and for "the record he has established." The latter gripped his hand and said, "Good luck." Earlier Matthews, Denfeld and Sherman had met in the former's office, when Denfeld received his first official notice of the appointment of his successor.

Confident of Future

After Sherman received the oath, Matthews made a brief speech. He said he was "confident that in the future the attitude and character" of all officers, men and civil employes "will be worthy of the "inspiring traditions" of the Navy.

Some 200 Navy officers, Waves and enlisted men gathered outside the Pentagon to cheer Denfeld as he left.

The civilian secretaries and members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff expect to leave tonight for a two-day visit to Fort Benning, Ga.—part of a plan of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson to "cross-educate" the armed services at the top. All of them made a cruise on the aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt a month ago, and later an Air Force trip is planned. Matthews and Price—subbing for Sherman—will represent the Navy.

War Assets Drops 1358, 351 in D. C.

The War Assets Administration announced yesterday it had ordered release of 1358 employes, of whom 351 are employed in Washington.

Jess Larson, General Services administrator, said reduction notices went out Tuesday and the reduction here would be completed by December 1. He said the number of employes now totals 2033, in a comparison with a high of 59,000 in November, 1946.

The reduction in force, Larson said, was the result of final liquidation of all but surplus property operations of the WAA. The organization, which disposed of billions of dollars in surplus war assets, was transferred to General Services last July for liquidation by December 31.

"Except for about one billion dollars, principally in surplus real estate," said Larson, "WAA's disposal job is about over. However, I had hoped to be able to retain a larger number of people to p sh sale of this property at the highest possible return to the Government.

"But the cut in the appropriation for winding up WAA from a request of 22.5 million dollars to 12.5 million dollars makes this impossible."

During its lifetime WAA disposed of surplus property which cost the Government more than 25.6 billion dollars. Reduction in personnel has been going on steadily since the 1946 peak, those employed reaching 4711 last March 31.

Blackmer Misses Jail, Fined $20,000

HENRY M. BLACKMER

Denver, Colo., Nov. 2 (U.P.)—Henry M. Backmer, 80, because of his age and failing health, today escaped imprisonment that has hung over his life for more than a quarter of a century.

Federal Judge Orie L. Phillips ordered the aged financier to pay a $20,000 fine on income tax charges and dismissed two long-standing perjury indictments against him.

The multimillionaire oil and mining man, whose name figured in the Teapot Dome scandal of the early 1920s, showed no emotion as he finally settled his accounts with the Government.

Judge Phillips reviewed a physicians' report that Blackmer was suffering from all bladder and heart ailments and said he believed imprisonment would be "fraught with serious consequences" for Blackmer and might cause his death.

"I do not believe the ends of justice would be served by sentencing the defendant to jail," Phillips said.

Blackmer, who flew home from Paris September 21, dramatically ending a 25-year exile to avoid Federal prosecution on the tax and perjury charges, had pleaded guilty to the income tax violations at his arraignment a month ago.

In dismissing the four perjury counts, Judge Phillips pointed out that evidence indicated Blackmer was not in Colorado on the dates the alleged perjury was committed.

He said there was little doubt that a secretary employed by Blackmer had completed in Blackmer's absence the income tax returns for 1920 and 1921, which formed the basis of the Government's perjury charges against the financier.

Royal Smoke

Princess Margaret Puffs a Fag

London, Nov. 2 (AP)—Princess Margaret has been seen smoking a cigarette in public.

The pretty 19-year-old daughter of King George puffed away at her first public cigarette early today at a Halloween charity ball.

There were gasps of surprise from other diners as the lively princess lit up. No other member of the royal family's distaff side has ever been seen doing anything like that.

But the King and Queen and other members of their household apparently were taking the incident in their stride, and ordinary Britishers seemed to think little about it. A few did comment privately that only one of a princess rank could really afford to smoke at all these days. Cigarettes here are 49 cents a pack for popular brands.

The princess attended the ball with a party of 23, including Sharman Douglas, daughter of the United States Ambassador. She sat next to Marquis of Blanford, the Duke of Marlborough's heir who has been reported to stand high in Margaret's favor.

Singer Tied; Suspect Caught After Chase

Toronto, Nov. 2 (AP).—Patti Page, 21, blonde torch singer from Tulsa, Okla., told police today she was bound with adhesive tape by a man who entered her hotel room on the pretext of delivering flowers.

Patti Page

Police arrested a 41-year old man who gave his name as William Daniel, after a chase through downtown streets. He is charged with assault causing bodily harm.

Miss Page said the man threatened her, saying: "I don't want your money. I want your body."

She said she was awakened shortly before 11 a. m. by a phone message saying a box of flowers was to be delivered to her room. A few minutes later, she said, the man entered and handed her a parcel that looked like flowers.

He told her to sit down, she said and bound her hands and feet with tape. She started to scream and he tried to gag her. Then he fled to the hallway.

gun, walked into the cashier's cage and directed Mrs. Catte to face the wall. He then scooped all the bills in sight into a green bag. He rifled the safe which was open.

However, the bandit overlooked about $13,000 in one drawer.

During the course of the holdup two additional customers entered the bank and were ordered to join Dr. Ware and McMillan in front of the cashier's cage. They were R. L. Linz of 612 Poplar st. and Joseph Barrett, 78, of Merrifield, Va.

As the bandits backed out the door, they ordered those inside not to move until they had counted to 50.

"We'll be up at the corner and we'll shoot you if you move before that," one of the men threatened.

The FBI and police were unable to get accurate descriptions of the two men.

Witnesses describing the man who scooped up the cash variously identified him between 25 and 36 years, 5 feet 9 inch to 6 feet, between 140 and 160 pounds. One said he was wearing a dark short coat. Another was sure it was a gray topcoat. One said he wore a brown hat. Another said the hat was gray.

However, they generally agreed that this man wore a black false mustache, had a pale complexion, had a heavy stubble of beard and wore a brass wrist watch with a wide expansion band. He wore black leather gloves which eliminated the possibility of fingerprints. There was a strip of white adhesive tape around his left wrist.

The second gunman was variously described as 28 and 35 years old, 5 feet 10 and 6 feet, of medium weight, with a bandage on his right lower jaw.

He wore a gray sweatshirt, overalls, a black knit sailor-type stocking cap and had dark hair and a reddish face.

The bandits made their getaway on Little Falls rd., dumping gallon jars filled with oil and nails at Van Buren st., Powhatan st. and Roosevelt st.

Along the route police recovered two felt hats, one light gray, the other dark gray, a new pair of overalls, several Luger slugs, a black whip-cord shirt and a net shopping bag.

Police said there was a possibility that a third man was involved, as driver of the getaway car. It was believed that the 1942 black Hudson bore District tags and that the car was headed for Washington.

Falls Church School Board Approves Census

The Falls Church School Board last night voted unanimously to pay the cost of tabulating a school census now being conducted by volunteers under auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association.

The cost will be about $370, the board was told by John Wallace, statistician, whose wife is a member of the board.

The board will use the census results in planning the location and size of a proposed new primary school and junior-senior high school. A $700,000 school loan referendum will be held November 19. Completion of the census is planned for November 14.

Wallace said the census will include all the territory in Fairfax County previously proposed for annexation by Falls Church. Statistics will be broken down by blocks, so in case the size of the annexed territory is decreased, an accurate picture of the city's school needs still will be available.

Judge Assails Court Outburst As 'Mad Fit'

The "Jonathan Little" custody trial ended yesterday in District Court after Mrs. Floyd Little screamed out her anguish in what the judge described as a "mad fit."

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough deferred judgment for "two or three days." The move was in line with other cases in which the judge fears a courtroom demonstration and orders a "cooling-off" period.

Center of the battle is 3-year-old Jonathan, a tousle-haired boy with a crippled arm. Since his birth, Jonathan has been kept by Mrs. Little of 1315 10th st. nw. under an adoption consent agreement signed by the natural mother, Mary Miller, 26, a waitress, of Landover, Md., who now wants him back.

The case was punctuated by charges and counter-charges of extramarital affairs of the two women.

But yesterday's outbursts by Mrs. Little highlighted the lengthy trial.

Speaking of her embattled family, she said:

"You are dragging every one of 'em that was happy family and pulling them all apart just to save one baby."

Mrs. Miller's attorney, John T. Bonner, charged that Mrs. Little, wife of a Capital Transit Co. employe, kept an unclean home. He pointed out that she was the center of a court battle over her refusal to allow health inspectors to enter her home to investigate complaints of filth.

"What constitutes a home," she snapped. "The physical structure or the spirtual structure. Home is no good, maybe, no matter whether the door knobs are of gold and the windows studded with diamonds. Love must dwell in a home."

Goldsborough pointed out that recently after he ordered Mrs. Little temporarily to give Jonathan to either the Board of Public Welfare or to Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Little tendered all three of the children to welfare authorities.

Commenting on Mrs. Little's testimony, Judge Goldsborough called it a "mad fit" and then said he believed it to be an "emotional explosion planned to keep her from answering questions propounded to her."

Father Divine's Wife Denies Story

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (U.P.)—Mother Divine, young white wife of Negro cult leader Father Divine, today termed "utterly false" a report in her hometown of Vancouver, B. C., that the couple was having marital trouble.

The former Edna Rose Ritchings, 24, said she and her 74-year-old husband were "extremely happy."

"We haven't had a cross word in four years," she said. "I go with Father Divine everywhere he goes."

The couple was joined in matrimony in "the Marriage Feast of the Lamb" in Washington on April 29, 1946.

Cincinnati Tenement Blaze Kills 6; 265 Saved in 2d Fire

By the United Press

A tenement fire in Cincinnati, Ohio, claimed six lives and even greater tragedy was averted narrowly when flames swept a wing of the State School for the Feeble Minded at Columbus, 100 miles away.

School officials led 265 helpless girls from a four-story brick extension to the institution and there were no casualties.

In Cincinnati, firemen said a discarded cigarette on a first-floor couch started a fire which trapped the occupants of the two upper floors of the tenement when the stairway was blocked by flames.

Two men, two women and a 9-year-old boy were burned to death and another woman was injured fatally when she leaped from a window. Seven other persons were overcome by smoke and a number jumped to the ground safely.

The quick thinking of an off-duty policeman, Robert Stewart, 27, saved 14 persons in a predawn apartment house fire in New York. Returning from the movies at 1 a. m., Stewart smelled smoke and investigated.

He rescued his wife and two small children and roused other occupants of the apartment.

Another fire destroyed most of the business district of the small town of Valley View, Tex., but there were no casualties.

Indiana Operators Scorn Lewis Offer

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A proposal by John L. Lewis to negotiate a strike settlement with the Indiana mine owners was quickly rejected by the operators yesterday.

Lewis made the offer in reply to plea by the Goveror of Indiana for an "immediate settlement" in order to avert "tragedy and suffering' 'in the winter-hit, coal-short Hoosier State.

The proposal of the United Mine Workers' president was widely interpreted as a move on the part of Lewis to break the solid front of the operators, most of whom are grouped in the National Bituminous Coal Wage Conference.

Gov. Henry F. Schricker, who earlier declared a state of emergency in Indiana, wired Lewis on Tuesday, appealing for a settlement of the strike.

"We are out of coal," the Governor said, "and unless dwindling stockpiles are replenished immediately, public utilities, hospitals and many schools will be forced to suspend operation. This will result in untold suffering and hardships for all of our people."

Yesterday Lewis advised the Governor he was free to inform the Indiana coal operators that the UMW would be willing to negotiate with them "alone and independent of the operators of any other State."

Hitherto negotiations for a 1949 work contract in the soft coal fields have been limited by Lewis to two groups: the national conference, made up of the Northern, Western and "captive" (owned by the steel mills) mines, and the Southern producers.

Lewis' proposal to deal with the operators of a single State, together with his announcement of Tuesday that he was meeting with his national policy committee in Chicago next Monday, gave rise to reports that John L. was about to break the operators' solid front, in the manner that Philip Murray and the CIO Steelworkers won a be reconciled to district negotiations," declared Harvey Cartwright, secretary of the Indiana Coal Operators Association. "If Mr. Lewis believes that constructive results can be obtained by reconvening the National Bituminous Coal Wage Conference, that can be arranged."

In his wire to the Governor of Indiana, Lewis charged that the union's efforts to settle the strike "have been stalemated by major industrial and financial interests."

He said that a contract agreement is a "prime requisite" to getting the mines in operation again.

"In the meantime," Lewis wired, "I advise your excellency that steel plants and other manufacturing units have in storage and are now hoarding a million or more tons of high-grade coal within the confines of the State of Indiana in excess of their present requirements."

separate peace settlement with Bethlehem.

Indiana coal operators, however, met in Terre Haute yesterday afternoon and promptly disposed of the Lewis offer.

"The issues involved are national in character and can not

"The State coal emergency committee which you have created certainly should arrange for the distribution of this hoarded and excess fuel to tide over the emergency."

At Bluefield, W. Va., listless contract talks between the union and the Southern operators collapsed. Similar negotiations with the Northern, Western and captive mine producers fell apart some two weeks ago.

From Springfield, Ill., came word that Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson had made an appeal for a quick settlement in letters to Lewis and the operators along the lines of the earlier wire by Indiana's Governor.

Stevenson said that the health of thousands of residents of Illinois was "imperiled" by the shortage of soft coal to heat homes, hospitals and State institutions. "It is clear we are rapidly approaching a crisis," he declared.

At Joliet, Ill., the strike-bound Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co. offered to sell enough coal from its Lockport plant to keep Joliet's 17 public schools open. The schools, housing 5000 students, had been ordered closed Friday for the lack of coal.

On the steel front, there was continued optimism that several of the big steel producers would soon follow the example of Bethlehem in agreeing to company-financed pensions and company-employe-financed social insurance.

Philip Murray, who heads both the striking United Steelworkers and the CIO, disclosed in Cleveland yesterday that his negotiators are offering "tentative agreements" to strike-bound companies in order to get the workers back into the mills while the details are worked out for contracts along the lines of the Bethlehem formula.

An agreement was expected with Jones & Laughlin, the industry's fourth largest producer. Bethlehem is the No. 2 producer. Another agreement was anticipated with Colorado Fuel & Iron Corp.

A group of members of Congress yesterday urged President Truman to use the strike injunction provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act in the coal and steel strikes. The group included two Republican Senators, Mundt (S. Dak.) and Butler (Nebr.); six Republican Representatives, Gwinn (N. Y.), Poulson (Calif.), Hoffman (Mich.), Case (S. Dak.), Werdel (Calif.), Smith (Kans.), and three Democratic Representatives, Lucas (Tex.), Gossett (Tex.), Wilson (Tex.).

Kaiser Tells Of U. S. Loans

Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser yesterday answered critics of his deals with the Federal Government by assering he has returned to the Treasury $188,086,000 from his operation of former war plants.

He issued a statement showing the taxes, interest and principal payments which his firms have paid to the Government since the war.

"So much incomplete information has been given the public regarding Kaiser purchases and payments on former war plants that I believe the public should be told the facts and actual figures," he said. "The taxpayers have profited and will continue to profit tremendously from Kaiser operations."

Kaiser then gave the following breakdown on payments to the Government from former war plants: Principal, $71,015,000; interest, $23,569,000; rentals, $17,647,000, and taxes, $75,855,000.

Acheson Speaks

Trade Group Asks Boost In Imports

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Business leaders at the National Foreign Trade Convention today urged speedy return of the United States to the gold standard, further cuts in some American tariff rates, and the welcoming of more foreign-made goods on the domestic market.

By unanimous vote, some 1800 representatives of leading manufacturing, exporting, importing, shipping, banking and communications companies drafted recommendations which would lead the world away from extreme nationalism and toward unrestricted world trade.

Then they heard Secretary of State Acheson call on the Nation to reverse its 30-year-old foreign trade policy and become an "import-minded" country, in order to close a six-billion-dollar trading gap.

At the convention dinner of the Foreign Trade Council, Acheson proclaimed a campaign to reduce tariffs, simplify customs, procedures, "modernize" other laws and otherwise expand the opportunities for foreign producers to sell their goods in this country.

The United States, he said, must get away from the system under which, for years, it has financed the shipment of huge amounts of its products abroad through gifts or large Government loans. Such measures as the European Recovery Program, he said, have served major national objectives.

They have reduced the supply of goods which otherwise would have been available to American buyers, Acheson said, adding: "Nor have these export surpluses been to our advantage as taxpayers—for they have necessarily been financed by direct taxation and by Government borrowings, the interest on which must come from taxes."

Such measures, Acheson continued, have helped establish the recovery and prosperity of other countries but now raise the question "what are we going to do about our balance of payments in the future?"

He said that for years he has heard that the United States has a "favorable" balance of trade because it sells abroad more than it buys abroad. In the years from 1914 through 1948, it has run up an export surplus of slightly more than 100 million dollars, about two thirds of which was paid for by United States Government grants and loans.

In a message to the convention, read to the world trade dinner, President Truman said:

"We know that we cannot sell unless we also buy. We know that grave imbalances of trade and productivity, and widespread underdevelopment persist in this world and that these must be remedied. We are recognizing our responsibilities as a creditor nation and we are seeking to remedy these imbalances in the joint interest of ourselves and of others."

The National Foreign Trade Council recently came out against United States acceptance of the ITO under the charter drawn at Havana.

The convention put its okay on the drive of Marshall Plan boss Paul G. Hoffman to get western Europe to lower its trade barriers and strive for economic unity. Its resolution noted that the Marshall Plan "was never designed nor intended to make each recipient nation self-sufficient in all things" but should "lead away from economic self-sufficiency and restrictive nationalism."

Police Seize 'Big Bookie'

he was just getting ready to leave town.

According to Blick, just inside the regular front door to Beach's apartment was a second door four inches thick.

Blick said his men would not have entered except on Beach's invitation because they had no search warrant.

Beach was charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. He was released in $1500 bond pending arraignment in Municipal Court today.

Police described Beach as a big-time bet-taker handling as much as $30,000 a day in business.

Records show he was arrested in 1939 and again in 1947 on numbers charges.

He was one of four men charged following a police raid on what was then described as Washington's "biggest" numbers headquarters, at 1527 I st., nw, January 6, 1947.

New Jersey Man Heads U. S. Bankers

San Francisco, Nov. 2 (AP).—F. Raymond Peterson of Paterson, N. J., was elevated today to the presidency of the American Bankers Association. He is chairman of the board of the First National Bank and Trust Co. of Paterson.

Peterson succeeds Evans Woollen, jr., chairman of the board, Fletcher Trust Co., Indianapolis.

James E. Shelton of Los Angeles was named vice president. He is president of the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles.

The executive council elected Glenn L. Emmons as treasurer. He is president of the First State Bank of Gallup, N. Mex.

ECA is not in the foreign relief business but in international banking for recovery, the acting administrator of the Economic Cooperation Administration told the bankers convention.

William C. Foster said that Europe in 1947 was like a businessman whose inventories were depleted, employes demoralized and cash rserves low.

There was only one banker in the world, he said, who could help such a man get back on his feet . . . the United States.

As part of the returns ECA is getting from its investment, Foster asked the delegates to consider "how many more billions we would be spending on our defense establishment if the Communists controlled Western Europe."

The annual cost, he said, might well exceed the total cost of the Marshall Plan.

Permitting a "free market" in gold, sought by miners who want higher prices for the metal, would be "a witless proceeding . . . matched only by our bonanza provisions for the special benefit of the miners of silver," the president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York told the convention.

Allan Sproul was equally firm in his opposition to a return to a gold-coin standard — permitting anyone to convert his money into gold, at any time.

The Federal Reserve System has been under attack most of the time in recent years from these two groups—the free marketers and the fixed-price gold-coin standard group, he explained.

"More recently, we have had a brief respite while the two groups fired at each other," he added, but "what I have to say will probably bring that brief respite to an end."

board power to refuse to seat or to expel any board member found by a two-thirds vote to be a Communist, Fascist or member of any other totalitarian movement or who helps accomplish the program of such people.

Another empowers the board to revoke the charter of any union whose "policies and activities are consistently directed toward the achievement of the program or purposes" of communism, fascism or other totalitarian movement.

Either board members or unions are given the privilege, however, of appealing to the convention.

Under another amendment, unions more than two months behind in per capita taxes will be deprived of representation on the executive board unless they are found not at fault for their arrears.

Celler Group Hears 'Little Businessmen'

Two self-styled "little businessmen" yesterday asked a House investigating committee for help from opposite directions in their competition with monopoly.

The Judiciary subcommittee headed by Representative Celler (D., N. Y.), was told by one witness that labor as well as big business should be curbed. Another demanded changes in the patent laws which he said would stimulate inventiveness and give competition an opportunity to force new ideas on the market.

Fred I. Raymond, a Chicago manufacturer, told the subcommittee no anti-monopoly drive could be successful unless identical curbs are placed on labor unions and industry. He suggested a statutory limit of 2000 employes for any one organization, business or labor, which operates in more than one location.

"In view of the mass strikes which hold the Nation in crisis," he said, "common sense and public opinion would suggest the need for a limit on big labor as well as big business.

"But we must not limit the one without at the same time limiting the other, for by doing so we would leave one supreme."

David M. Kasson of New York, part owner of General Die and Stamping Co., declared that not for 50 years have the patent laws rewarded the "little inventor" whom they were designed to aid. The great majority of patents today, he said, were "detail" patents "created by corporation engineers who have assigned their rights to these inventions to their employers for pin money."

Kasson charged that General Electric Co. had practically driven all small manufacturers of fractional horsepower motors out of business by selling motors below the cost of production. It is able to do this, he said, because of its profits from lamp bulbs, in which it has a virtual monopoly protected by a series of "detail" patents issued over a period of years.

The witness urged that the term of a patent's life be reduced from 17 years as at present to seven. This, he declared, would give the inventor an opportunity to take a firm hold on the market, which he could keep only by constantly improving his product after the patent expired.

Works Body Urged To Develop D. C. Area

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, 3d., veteran Capital City planner, yesterday proposed creation of a National Capital Metropolitan Works Agency.

Such an agency, patterned after the New York-New Jersey Port Authority, is needed, he said, to speed the proper development of the Greater Washington area, in bridges, highways, water supply and sewage disposal systems.

General Grant, former chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, made the proposal at the opening meeting of the national fall assembly of the American Society of Civil Engineers at Hotel Statler.

Urges Alexandria Bridge

The proposed agency outlined by General Grant would receive funds for plans and operations, "to such extent as practicable," from taxing authorities; would be empowered to borrow through bond issues to finance its projects; would have the right of eminent domain to acquire properties and rights of way, and would have a "reasonably free hand to carry out approved projects without having to go to Congress for legislation in each particular case."

Pointing out the difficulties of obtaining funds by local appropriation, he said the proposed agency would speed development of such "badly needed" projects as:

1. A bridge across the Potomac connecting Alexandria directly with the District. For years, Grant said, everyone has agreed on its necessity but "no one has had the courage to initiate steps to finance it."

2. A coordinated water supply and sewer disposal system for the whole metropolitan area.

3. A coordinated waterfront development. Plans for this exist, Grant pointed out, but "assurance of their being carried out is needed." Already, he said, the Federal Housing Authority, "against the Federal Government's own interests," is occupying an important alternate route for the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway around Alexandria.

4. Progressive action to secure step-by-step reduction of pollution in both the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers.

1200 Attending Sessions

"The New York-New Jersey Port Authority offers an example of a possible type of solution. The newly established Missouri-Illinois Interstate Agency is a more recent one.

Grant spoke at a public session of the national organization for civil engineers, with some 27,000 members. About 1200 are attending the three-day meeting.

Point 4 Plan Called 'Proof' Of U. S. System

President Truman yesterday said his Point Four program for building up underdeveloped foreign areas will help prove that the American system is the best for the peoples of the world.

In an informal talk to the American Society of Civil Engineers, the President also declared he believes in big plans—plans that are big enough to meet a situation one cannot see at present.

Mr. Truman said the aim of the Point Four proposal is to develop the world's resources for the benefit of the world's peoples, not their exploitation. He first advanced the plan as item four in the international program laid out in his inaugural address.

Sees 2-Way Struggle

Mr. Truman said the world is now faced by a struggle between two ideologies, one backed by a moral code and one not backed by a moral code.

The American system with its moral code, he added, can do best for the people of the world.

He said he hopes engineers, doctors, and others with special skills will inform themselves on Point Four.

He added that if the standard of living of the world is raised just 2 percent, American factories will never catch up with the demand for goods.

He said there are resources in the world that have never been touched and if they are put to work to keep the world from being hungry, then no nation will carry on a war to grasp something the other fellow has.

The President, in his discussion of big plans in contrast with little ones, said the next census will show an American population of about 150 million. He said it is our business not to plan for that figure but to anticipate a population double that in the next 100 to 150 years.

"We can't get the sights too high," he said.

Hits City Planning

He told the engineers that not a city in this Nation is properly planned. The only one laid out to anticipate the automobile, he added, was Salt Lake City.

He got a laugh from the audience when he said the man who planned Salt Lake City "had vision in more ways than one."

Emphasizing the importance of engineers in all kinds of planning, including that in Government, Mr. Truman said nearly every Federal activity except legal and diplomatic affairs requires engineering skill and knowledge, adding:

"If I have my way, the Department of State will have some engineers before we get through."

Truce Likely in Bridge Battle

Peace—or at least a truce—appeared likely last night in the battle of the proposed Anacostia River bridges.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission issued a statement pointing out that the planning body's report released on Monday had been "only that of its planning staff." This report favored a bridge at the extension of Massachusetts ave.

The statement noted that the District Highway Department's report, plugging the rival East Capitol st. site, likewise was a staff plan on which the Commissioners have not acted.

The planning unit's proposal, concurred in by its Director of Planning, John Nolen, jr., drew hot words from District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young.

The planning commission is expected to make some decision at its December 7 meeting.

Truman Heads For Important Talk Tonight

En route to Minneapolis with President Truman, November 2 (AP). President Truman headed today for an important speech in the St. Paul, Minn., auditorium at 10:30 p. m. (EST) Thursday. The address will wind up "Truman Day" at Minnesota's centennial celebration.

William M. Boyle, jr., the National Democratic chairman, went along as the President began the trip on the first anniversary of the election that kept him in the White House.

Just before his train pulled out at 2:32 p. m. (EST), Mr. Truman told reporters that he will make a "nonpolitical bipartisan speech."

"It is a speech that throws no bricks at any other political party," he said.

On his trip across Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin to speak in Minnesota Thursday night, Mr. Truman planned to appear outside his car at a few operating stops. Aides said he would make no platform talks, however.

Arriving at Minneapolis at 2 p. m. (EST) Thursday, he will take part in a parade from the depot to his hotel.

On his way to the Hotel Lowry in St. Paul, the President will visit the Shrine Hospital and make several other stops.

He plans to attend a reception and dinner at the hotel before leaving for the St. Paul auditorium.

Starting the train trip back to Washington after his speech, he is due to reach the Capital at 10:15 p. m. Friday.

Truman Gets 4-Color Choice For Bathroom

President Truman is expected to have his choice of blue, gray, green or pale yellow glass walls for his bathroom in the reconstructed White House.

Like all the others planned for the revamped Executive Mansion, Mr. Truman's bathroom will be the last word in American plumbing. But it will be so constructed that it can have a new set of fixtures in another 20 years on the theory that American ideas in plumbing get out of date about that fast.

The bathroom details are among the many now being worked on by the staff of the Commission on the Renovation of the Executive Mansion. The commission meets today at the White House to approve the $100,000 fixed fee bid of John McShain, Inc., for the renovation general contract, to approve distribution of the bits-and-pieces taken out of the building to historical, educational and other similar groups and to approve floor plans for the rebuilding.

Bathrooms in the second-floor living quarters generally will have glass-door showers as well as tubs. The colored glass walls will be of the hard vitreous enamel type, rolled in large sheets with the color baked in. They will reach from floor to ceiling, according to present plans. Colored floor tiles and painted ceiling plaster probably will complement the wall scheme.

Bedroom-bathroom combinations are expected to have the same color schemes. So far, no definite choices have been made. Technically, the renovation commission is supposed to approve the choice, but President Truman is expected to have his wish.

"Both the President and Mrs. Truman have excellent artistic taste," according to Lorenzo S. Winslow, White House architect, who is the commission secretary. Maj. Gen. Glen E. Edgerton is the commission's executive director. They and the commission staff are now busy working up various detailed plans for the full commission's approval.

Doing Nothing Held a Danger In Heart Cases

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—A pair of heart specialists struck a blow today at the "take it easy" theory in caring for victims of heart ailments.

In an address before the Interstate Postgraduate Medical Association, Dr. William G. Leaman, jr., warned that "doing nothing is as dangerous as doing too much."

Dr. Leaman is a professor at Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania and president of the Philadelphia Heart Association. What doctors should advise, he said, is for families of heart disease victims to "stop making invalids" of the sufferers.

Dr. William D. Stroud, University of Pennsylvania, said fear is a major handicap in recovery from heart ailments.

"The patient should be reassured by his physician, honestly removing the fear of sudden death," Dr. Stroud said. He described "rest and reassurance" as the best treatment for acute cases.

He said medical experts are "astounded at how well a majority of patients do who have had a nonfatal coronary occlusion.

Dr. Leaman said that over 70 percent of patients at Philadelphia heart clinics "can perform useful work and support their families."

That Was No Stabbing, That Was His Wife

Leicester, England, Nov. 2 (U.P.)—Flight Lieut. Richard Thurlington, Royal Air Force, today said that when he grabbed the wrist of Bertram Bishop, 34, who was stabbing a woman in the back with a knife, Bishop explained:

"It's all right. It's my wife."

Bishop is charged with the attempted murder of his wife, Doris.

Army Runaround

If a new Army order to field commanders means what it says, the broadened racial policy announced last month is in process of becoming meaningless. Although Army officials have denied that the order was intended to subvert previous policy, the phraseology seems to imply quite the contrary. That policy was to open previously restricted occupational specialties and service schools to Negroes. The principal defect was that it did not guarantee that qualified Negroes would be permitted to practice their specialties, for it restricted their assignment to all-Negro units or to overhead installations. The new order vitiates even this small advance by limiting assignments in overhead units to "Negro spaces."

Presumably this language means that Negroes may be assigned only to jobs previously held by members of their own race in the mixed overhead installations. If this is to be the case, it is hard to see how the opening of occupational specialties can be anything but a sham. Indeed, this new restriction amounts to retrogression. Even the controversial Gillem Report, which has been an Army Bible, recommended that Negroes with special skills "be employed as individuals in appropriate overhead and special units."

From all indications Secretary Gray is sincerely trying to do away with the restrictions on efficient use of Negro manpower, and the circumstances seem to indicate that he did not see this order before it went out. That is all the more reason for him to assert himself, for it is difficult to believe that the new order can be anything but an attempt at sabotage of the declared policies of the President and Defense Secretary Johnson—policies already implemented much more fully by the other two services.

Hot Time Coming

Well, if you're still worried about this winter's fuel bills and electric light bills, it is doubtless comforting to be assured by no less an authority than Dr. Harold C. Urey that the world is getting warmer all the time and the days longer. The idea seems to be that radioactivity at the center of the earth—which, as you probably know, is nothing but a great, molten, white-hot mass of iron anyhow—continues to generate and send up to the surface vast currents of heat.

For a long time all this energy was used up in the business of getting the continents, most of them rather huge and clumsy affairs, shifted to their proper positions on the planet and in getting the great mountain ranges where they belong. But now that the continents are all in place, the heat goes on being generated just the same. Having nothing better to do, it expends itself in pushing around great land masses in a way that alters the inertia of the earth, so that it requires a longer and longer time to rotate upon its axis.

Thus, since the age of Confucius or thereabouts, the days have been getting longer at the rate of two thousandths of a second every hundred years, and, of course, the centuries are getting longer, too.

All this, if Dr. Urey knows what he is talking about, indicates that the watches and clocks of this world, including those of the Naval Observatory, and for that matter even the sun dials, are slow by at least several seconds. In the next two billion years or so, Dr. Urey said, the radioactivity of the earth will increase the temperature of the surface by several thousand degrees. That prospect sounds considerably less comfortable than our famous Washington summers. In other words, it will be the heat rather than the humidity we shall complain about.

But before you worry too much, it might be well to reflect that Dr. Urey's cosmogenic theory is the direct opposite of the one now prevalently held. The orthodox theory—that is, the one expounded by La Place, and until recently set forth in the schoolbooks—is that the earth was originally a fiery mass that presently cooled off enough on the surface to permit the development of plant and animal life. Dr. Urey seems to think that this hypothesis has been rendered untenable by the discoveries of nuclear science. The evidence now is that the earth was just one vast deep-freeze unit until it was gradually thawed out by the radioactivity of its minerals. Life then originated in some primeval pile of slush or snow.

We suspect that our scientific friends will be arguing rather passionately about Dr. Urey's notions for a long time and that the argument will end, like the old-fashioned argument about whether the universe is winding up or running down, in a draw. So it might be a good idea to go ahead and order your winter's supply of coal or fuel oil, just as you would have done if Dr. Urey had not made his speech the other day to the National Academy of Sciences at Rochester. Meanwhile, if it's of any interest, we notice that the Weather Bureau is predicting frost almost any night now.

Private Pensions

If the other big steel companies follow Philip Murray's injunction to "get in line" with Bethlehem, the union will be able to claim a victory in the fight over noncontributory pensions. For under the agreement arrived at with the Bethlehem Steel Corp., the full cost of retirement pensions is to be borne by the company, with the workers paying half the cost of death, sickness, accident, and hospitalization benefits. While the public has good cause to welcome a break in the stalemate that has tied up the steel industry for many weeks, sober second thoughts suggest that a settlement based on the terms obtained from Bethlehem would lay the foundation for a costly pension system that cannot be applied without modification to all steel companies. As a matter of fact, representatives of some smaller companies have already protested that the settlement is not a satisfactory pattern so far as they are concerned.

The first requisite of a good pension system is that it be put on a sound financial basis that will insure uninterrupted payment of benefits in bad times as well as good. Pension systems imposed on financially weak concerns provide no such assurance. Even financially strong companies may fall on evil times, may be liquidated, or may decide to abandon their pension programs at some future date. Another serious defect of private pension systems is their failure to include millions of workers employed by concerns that cannot afford the extra cost of financing them. Moreover, private pension plans restrict the mobility of labor, since workers entitled to pensions are unwilling to forfeit their pension rights by shifting to unpensioned employment.

Another serious defect, one noted by Prof. Sumner L. Slichter in an article on The Pressing Problem of Old Age Security, is that older workers are handicapped in finding employment in concerns that pension their employes according to length of service. As employers do not like to pay substandard pensions, they avoid the difficulty by not taking on older workers. At the inception of a private pension plan, too, accrued liabilities are always high and are especially burdensome when large numbers of workers with long years of service are close to retirement age. The cost of these accrued liabilities may not be immediately apparent. But in the course of a few years a failure to make provision for them may result in claims that will bankrupt pension funds.

While a strong union may be able to exact concessions that will provide some protection against breakdowns or abandonment of company pension plans, no union, however strong, can, as Professor Slichter says, impose an adequate pension plan on employers who are financially weak. And the limitations of such plans are, of course, enhanced if all the cost of pensions has to be borne by employers.

What this country needs is a liberalization of the contributory Federal system of social insurance. Private pension systems can never be an adequate substitute for this kind of protection, and it is most unfortunate that union leaders should be directing their energies toward securing them for their members instead of concentrating their efforts on improvement and extension of a comprehensive system that would benefit all workers.

The steel board suggests—very unwisely, in our opinion—that in the absence of adequate Government insurance, industry should fill the gap. The fact is that industry cannot fill the gap. Under the pressure of a disastrous strike the big steel companies may, perhaps, capitulate to union demands. But the dispute over pensions raises issues that cannot be satisfactorily settled by a contest of endurance. Not only do the details of private pension plans require prolonged study before they can be made the basis for intelligent bargaining (as the steel board has admitted); there is a grave question whether the spread of such plans may not hamper the development of a sound, comprehensive Federal social insurance system.

Accord At The Hague

There will be general rejoicing in the free world over the Statute of Netherlands-Indonesian Union which has come out of the conference at The Hague. The parley has been protracted. The arguments have been many and intricate. The statute reflects give and take by both parties. Yet, precisely because of the difficulty, the statute has the better chance of becoming a dynamic charter of a new Dutch-Indonesian understanding, as well as a self-imposed covenant in the guidance of the new ship of state of the opulent and teeming archipelago.

There is nothing quite like the present arrangement in the history of independence. The Republic of United Indonesia stands before the world with its full sovereignty recognized by its old metropolitan proprietor. But at the same time it voluntarily establishes a partnership with that same proprietor called a Netherlands-Indonesian Union for designated purposes. These have to do with such matters as the facilitation of trade, conduct of foreign relations, and the maintenance of security.

The achievement is a worthy testimonial to the accommodating attitude of Dr. van Royen on the Dutch side and Mohammed Hatta on the side of the Indonesians. And both of them, we feel, would attest to the third party genius of our Mr. Merle Cochran. Mr. Cochran, whose negotiating skill we have already praised, was American member of the U. N.'s Good Offices Committee, and, we believe, is Ambassador-designate to Pakistan. None can overrate his services to the parties at interest at The Hague. This must have been the way Mr. Cochran approached his task—always with the reminder that they were parties at interest, not parties at issue.

The statute now remains to be worked out in practice. In these matters it is the spirit that counts, for the difficulties ahead—the pacification of the country, establishment of the Indonesian Federation, fair treatment of clauses relating to the Dutch—are never soluble in terms of mechanics only. In similar happenings in the past the test of statesmanship has always been in the canalization of revolutionary fervor into reconstruction. We wish success to the new endeavor, with the reminder that stability can be spread when men of vision are in charge, and that all Asia may be influenced by the results.

Sherman's Task

Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman is probably the best man to reorient the Navy along the lines intended in the Unification Act. The new Chief of Naval Operations helped write the unification bill in the first place, and is on intimate terms with many of his contemporaries in the other services. Thus, though he is a naval aviator, he has a breadth of understanding extending beyond the confines of his own service. He comes to his new post without the handicap that the fightin' and feudin' admirals suffer from.

Some of Admiral Sherman's detractors have cited his failure to testify before the House Armed Services Committee as a "sell out" and "appeasement." No such inference is warranted. As a leader in unification Admiral Sherman could hardly have been expected to turn and denounce his own views. In actuality, the fact that he was not called upon may indicate that he was being considered for his new job at the time of the hearings—a factor which would tend to prove that the removal of Admiral Denfeld had been contemplated in advance of his testimony.

Admiral Sherman's position does not require him to be a stooge for anyone. It calls merely for recognition of the law of the land as supreme, acceptance of decisions once made, and a recognition that the totality of defense is more important than the claims of any individual service. Perhaps the most irritating thing about the Navy dissidents has been their insistence that they and only they are 100 percent right, and it is this sort of inflexibility that the new Chief of Naval Operations will have to modify.

Admiral Sherman's first job will be to show that the Navy still promises a career in a legitimate field of national defense. This new sense of mission must be inculcated from outside the Navy as much as from within. If such a mission does not mean even division of funds among the services, neither does it mean that the Navy's function should be construed as merely that of fighting another navy. Fundamentally the Navy is a means of exerting national power against an enemy. What is needed at the top defense level is not rigid definitions of roles, but constant reevaluation of the instruments available for the over-all job.

Cleansing The CIO

The CIO appears to be genuinely on the way toward "cleansing" itself, as President Philip Murray put it, of its Communist influences. These have been controlling in a few unions, although by no means dominant in the CIO as a whole. Henceforward, apparently, they will be barred from the CIO executive board. Moreover, the several unions controlled by Communist leaders, or by leaders who are stooges for backstage Communist wire pullers, seem slated for swift expulsion by the convention now in session at Cleveland. The United Electrical Workers and the Farm Equipment Workers have already been thrown out.

This kind of self-cleansing seems to us to be the one proper and effective way of dealing with the problem raised by Communists in the labor movement. Attacks from the outside are almost certain to be unavailing, especially when they may be pretexts for attacks upon the labor movement itself. This was certainly the fundamental error of the non-Communist oath provision of the Taft-Hartley law. It endeavored to force what could be accomplished only voluntarily from within. Left to themselves, American workers will handle their own Communist problem in their own way.

Labor is perhaps the most sophisticated element of American life with respect to the Communists, having wrestled long and intimately with the problem they present. Union after union has experienced Communist infiltration and, having experienced it, has thrown the Communists out of power by its own democratic procedures. The CIO is now merely following a pattern established by many of its constituent bodies. It will be healthier and stronger and more effective as an instrument of democracy through growing up this way on its own. The process is a heartening demonstration of democracy at work.

MAN

Beyond the shining day,
Beyond the glowing noon,
Forever waits the dark
That must possess him soon.

Yet being made of this
Most poignantly aware,
He will be wise to spurn
The garment of despair.

He will be wise to stand
Exultant in the light,
However brief his day,
However near his night.

Koestler On Palestine

The person responsible for assigning the review October 30 of Arthur Koestler's new book to an anti-Zionist and pro-Arab like Kermit Roosevelt is in a sense to be congratulated. He evidently had no hope of finding a reviewer who would try to be objective, so he made a choice of one whose background and prejudices should lead to controversial and thought-provoking comments.

My objection, however, is based on fairness, a principle with which The Washington Post has long been associated. Would it not have been fairer and more equitably balanced to have two reviews, with the other reviewer having a different background and outlook from that of Mr. Roosevelt?

I have not yet had the opportunity of reading Promise and Fulfillment: Palestine 1917-1949. But I did read Quentin Reynolds' review of it in the New York Times of October 23. It almost seems as if the two were reviewing different books.

For example, Mr. Roosevelt states that Koestler's analysis of Ernest Bevin's role in British policy, while more temperate than others from Zionist sources, "is still a good deal less than fair." Mr. Reynolds, on the other hand, explains how Koestler handles the case of Bevin . . . when he is finished there is very little integrity or decency left in the 245 pounds of the British Foreign Minister. He does this not by furiously angry vilifications (an old Labor leader like Bevin was brought up on that diet), but by confronting Bevin with his own public promises and with the avowed policy of the Labor Party, which latter, under pressure by Bevin, repudiated its comments." Is this technique a "good deal less than fair"?

Mr. Roosevelt makes the Israeli authorities partners in many of the acts of terrorism committed by Irgun Zvai Leumi on the basis of Koestler's statements. He says nothing of their opposition to the Stern gang. The terrorist action which comes immediately to mind is the assassination of Bernadotte. Mr. Reynolds quotes Koestler on that: "As for the actual assassins of Bernadotte, my hunch is that they will never be found and that they are protected by a power outside the reach of Israel's police."

Today, when so many people discuss and even quote books by reading reviewers' comments rather than the books themselves, a reviewer has a dual obligation. He must indicate the scope and theme of the book and then his comments, but making clear which are his opinions and which are statements from the book. I, for one, am going to find Promise and Fulfillment interesting not only as a book but as a means of comparing the reviews of Messrs. Reynolds and Roosevelt.

"Radio In Transit"

Thanks to The Washington Post for its reporting of the hearing on radio in streetcars and buses.

It is interesting to note the solid support of the leaders of the so-called citizens' associations for the atrocity of advertising and banal music foisted on the public by the Capital Transit Co. In this as in a number of other civic issues the citizens associations appear to follow a "party line" which excludes consideration of the welfare of the community as a whole.

It is also astonishing to note that the labor and liberal organizations didn't even appear at the hearings to speak a word in behalf of the unorganized people who oppose the invasion of their rights as transit riders. And where were the organized protectors of minority rights? It seems to me that if these organizations are to be successful in their quest for support of unorganized people for issues they think important, they had better get into issues that are important to the unorganized.

Thank you for your thoughtful editorial of October 29 in regard to "Radio In Transit." As you stated an extensive poll would have to be made before we could determine whether the majority favor or oppose such an innovation. Thus far no one, whom I have heard express an opinion, has been polled.

Moreover, even if only a minority disapprove, why should Capital Transit expect the public to help solve its financial problems?

People who do any traveling at all realize that the fare in the District and vicinity is at a high peak. If Capital Transit cannot solve its problems in a better way than inflicting radio on its patrons, then let me suggest that we have public ownership as in New York. GRACE ROSE.

Hatpins For Defense

The following is in connection with a recent item concerning the arrest of a woman who was seen to carry an icepick so that it protruded from the low-cut neck of the dress she was wearing. It is assumed that the arrest was not due to the cut of the dress, but to the fact that she was carrying an icepick.

As a citizen (and a woman) I wonder if anyone will advise me on the question of suitable and unnoticeable equipment for self-defense in Washington. I myself favor the carrying of a suitably long and strong hatpin.

As a gentleman of my acquaintance said, it is guaranteed to make anyone "let go," also is effective in showing afterward with whom the engagement was had, since it leaves a definite mark. Worn in a hat, it is not very convenient on short notice; worn otherwise, I hope it is not illegal. When one goes out without a hat, one might presumably intend wearing one home, and need the hatpin along for such sartorial emergency. Hence, I hope the hatpin classifies as an article of clothing and not as a concealed weapon.

Tear gas bombs, put up small in the shape of a fountain pen, would be my choice, but it seems impossible to get one, also the police consider tear gas lethal except when used in law enforcement. That is, used in self-defense, it is lethal.

Certainly no woman should be expected to traverse Washington streets and hallways of buildings in Washington without some defense.

Meaning Of Unification

A story on the front page of your issue of October 27 quotes Col. Paul H. Griffith, Assistant Secretary of Defense, as saying: "Some of the top brass have been disloyal and that is disloyalty to unification, which is the law of the land."

In all of the stories, articles, and editorials which I have seen concerning the current armed forces unification hearings, nowhere have I seen a clear definition or concept of "unification." How can the "top brass" be accused of disloyalty to unification when each person in authority seems to have his own concept of what constitutes that condition?

Is it expected that the services are to be led by second-rate men who docilely render lip service to the current Administration just to maintain an appearance of sweetness and harmony, even while there is in fact disharmony and confusion, and morale is falling? Leaders with backbone and faith in their convictions, men whom the services can respect and trust, will speak out when they feel that current policies are impairing the defense of the country.

Even though he does not seem to have made his ideas concerning unification clear, at least not to the rank and file of the services and to the public, Secretary Johnson evidently believes that his own ideas of unification are the only ones which should apply, and that if the members of the armed services happen not to subscribe to them, they should have their heads knocked together or get out. This is a tactless attitude and hardly the method to use to influence mature thinking men of sincere convictions to work together.

The current arguments seem to stem from the difficulties encountered on the Joint Chiefs of Staff, where the Navy claims to have been frequently outvoted 2 to 1 on major strategical decisions, and from the apparently tactless and arbitrary handling of certain pet Navy projects.

A strict mathematical analysis of the methods of waging war—numbers of guns, aircraft, men, tons of supplies, distance involved, transportation problems, etc.—can be applied just so far, and then the less tangible elements of strategy and tactics enter the picture, and since each member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, being a highly trained and experienced professional officer, must have his own concept of the strategy and tactics to be applied to win, it is difficult to see how a strict mathematical vote can always point unerringly to the correct answer. Any one of the strategical concepts may happen to be the right one, but it is more likely that none of them is completely correct.

It is foolish to think that the men comprising the JCS, who have had widely different training, served with different services and had different viewpoints for nearly 40 years, can come together at a conference table and think exactly alike. Perhaps a short period of indoctrination of each member of the JCS in the methods of operation, the needs and the capabilities of the other two services would serve to eliminate many of the disagreements before they arise.

Still, there is no doubt but that the Secretary of Defense will have to make some major policy decisions, and that they may be adverse to one service or another. But if such decisions are made after there has been a complete and formal presentation of all of the facts, and after adequate discussion by the JCS and the Secretaries, any service will accept the decision.

Much of the current bickering probably can be eliminated if there is given to the public and to the services at large a clear, simplified, workable definition of "unification," and there is less talk of knocking heads together and more use of tact and reason.

Man-Woman Imbalance

By Malvina Lindsay

Too Much Segregation

THE ENGLISH village of Cranford in the book of that name by Mrs. Gaskill was almost manless. Today there are many American villages approaching that state. Worse, there are many intangible "Cranfords" everywhere in the all-feminine circles of activity in which many women move.

There are now more than 6½ million widows in the United States, a recent report of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. states. About one out of four of the 460,000 women who annually become widows is under 40.

Hence some social scientists and physicians concerned over the Nation's growing surplus of widows, and even its prospects of more spinsters and bachelors, are suggesting that more efforts be made to promote social intermingling of the sexes at all ages. This would aim not only to promote marriage and alleviate loneliness, but also to broaden viewpoints.

The man-woman imbalance in this country is as yet a small cloud on the social horizon. But it could in time decrease women's bargaining power, make less secure the power and position they have attained — partly through scarcity. Or it could create a "mother knows best" pressure group. It could help increase divorce, illegitimacy, prostitution. If too many social "Cranfords" existed it could accentuate dualism in thought and interest of men and women.

HAPPILY the small excess of women over men is not at present decreasing younger women's chances to marry. Bachelors outnumber spinsters in the under-35 group, the Census Bureau reports. In 1948 there were 76 single women under 35 for every 100 single men in the same age span. However, many widows and divorcees in this group are in the marriage market.

While the country now has 104 women for every 100 men 14 years and older, this feminine excess is chiefly in older age groups. Women's greater life expectancy than men and their tendency to marry men older than themselves have swelled the widow surplus. All sorts of remedies for this are being proposed. These range from better care of husbands to the marrying by women of men younger than themselves so their span of widowhood will be shortened.

However, the chances of spinsters, young or otherwise, to marry are being cut down by restricted immigration and by geographical barriers. A high rate of single men immigrants formerly swelled the surplus of marriageable men. Also in the past this country did not have so many of its young men flung over the globe in defense activities. Finally many young women can't go where the most single men are—down on the farm.

There are only 59 spinsters for every 100 single men in rural areas. In the big cities to which women trek—for economic and other reasons—the ratio is more nearly equal, though here a long term tendency on the part of men toward bachelorhood is showing up. In small towns and villages, the women seem to have the least marriage chances.

GEOGRAPHY has always handicapped American spinsters, as men through the ages have tended to "go West." Rebecca Harding Davis (mother of Richard) became so aroused in the 1870's about New England spinsters that she tried to start a crusade to have them relocated in western States.

Today's social scientists who urge that more be done to utilize in marriage and in social relations what men we have also are concerned about overcoming geography. But at least they have help from the women, who often are wholeheartedly ready to go in search of greener matrimonial pastures.

Nevertheless problems of geography and social contact still handicap many young women in finding mates—despite the present great rush to the altar. There is growing feeling that parents should do more to help their children find the environment and associations that will promote normal and happy mating.

The great numbers of women, widows and others who lead "Cranford" lives, cannot all find mates down on the farm or elsewhere. Indeed many of them are not looking for such. But more could be done both on a community and an individual basis to bring men and women of mature age in mental and social contact.

Even though a physical imbalance of men and women cannot be entirely prevented, that of ideas and attitudes can. As it is, women's viewpoint and approach are lacking too greatly in some fields, notably government, and are too dominant in others. Less social segregation of the sexes might be productive of many values besides marriage.

Chest Success

Kudos on your reporting of Monday's belwether firm results in this dynamic Community Chest campaign. They give a great boost all along the line.

Maybe these valiants in the business unit (their job now done), will train their guns on the men in the medical and other professions, thus vouchsafing success for the Chest and funds for the 250,000 needy human beings its agencies aim to serve.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Liberal Opportunity

ROME.—In my preceding article I noted the fact that in continental western Europe—particularly in France, western Germany and Italy—men who profess the liberal rather than the socialist principle have now a small ascendancy within the anti-Communist coalitions that support the governments. But no one who believes as I do, that only a liberal Europe could be united, prosperous and free, can afford to think wishfully that the success of the liberals is assured. He can say only that success is possible.

Lippmann

FOR WE must remember that the liberals are in the ascendant because the Communists, the Socialists and the left Christian Democrats have split the vote of the wage earners and of the discontented peasants. There is no solid liberal majority in any of the large nations. There is only a slender liberal plurality. It would disappear quickly if the breach between the Communists and Socialists were healed.

The liberals can never forget that the breach can be healed and that the wage earners and peasants can become united against them. Unless the liberals can achieve a real majority among the masses of the people by the success of their liberal measures, it is most probable that the Socialists and Communists will once again form a united opposition. Though there is no quarrel so bitter as that between the official Socialist leaders and the Communists of the Cominform, it is probable that this quarrel does not reach deeply into the mass of their followers. The quarrel could therefore be composed.

That could happen if the popular standard of life were to fall while the benefits and the profits of recovery were largely preempted by the propertied classes. Sufficient discontent based on a sense of injustice and unequal sacrifices could heal the breach which Communist tactics have caused.

The breach could also be healed if, as is not at all impossible, the Communist Parties of western Europe should begin to take the Tito line—that is to say to rebel against Russian domination while remaining Communist.

Thus the liberals at the head of governments have a precarious hold on their offices. If they are not to be pushed aside again, they will very quickly have to make bold and energetic use of what may be no more than a fleeting opportunity.

HERE THOSE of us in America who are critical of European socialism and would like the liberals to succeed must be on our guard. It will not do to fix our attention solely on the welfare measures which cost more than these countries can afford, and on the taxes and regulations which discourage the private formation of capital, encourage hoarding and the flight of capital, and destroy the incentive to enterprise,—and on the effect of full employment plus trade unionism plus labor parties in weakening the discipline of industry.

The liberals, if they are free of class prejudice, must pay equal attention to the other side of the picture: to the fact that so much of the industry of Europe is publicly subsidized, is administered monopolitically, and is protected not only by international cartels, but by monetary controls.

ANY ATTEMPT to apply the liberal principle to the working class alone will almost certainly mean a disastrous failure. Yet there is a most serious possibility that something like this may be attempted—that in the name of liberalism the protective system may be dismantled for the working class while the propertied classes continue to protect themselves against the rigors and the risks of competition. There is a good deal of double talk about economic freedom. There are powerful interests which, like the barons and King John, mean by freedom only their own freedom—a license to the cartels and monopolies to continue to be subsidized but not regulated or broken up by the state.

The inner crisis of liberalism will, I believe, develop on this issue—on whether, to put it bluntly, the liberal principle is to be applied to the whole economy, to business as well as to labor. The genuine liberals—of whom there are some with considerable influence in all countries—will attempt an even-handed liberalism. They are preparing to bring in measures to reform the tax laws and the corporation laws in order to liberalize and to make honestly competitive the industries which are now so monopolistic, and in the American sense of the word so unenterprising. They have a hard road ahead of them. For the industrial habits and customs of European business have been formed for generations in an environment of subsidies, protection, price-fixing, and the avoidance of competition.

THE AMERICAN influence on the outcome, though not decisive, will be considerable. As long as Marshall aid continues in its present form American officials in the European capitals and in Washington can determine the use of the large counterpart funds—of the local currencies earned by the European governments from the sale of the goods which the American Government provides. These counterpart funds are a very important influence in the economy of France, Western Germany and Italy. It is most important that the American officials who yield this influence should know how to distinguish clearly and firmly between genuine liberalism and that pseudo-liberalism, which is so often the masquerade of reactionary vested interests.

Germany And Russia

By Marquis Childs

New Totalitarian Combination?

BERLIN.—From this farthest outpost you can look a long way to the east. Conquest of the East has long been the goal of both the Prussian and the Russian, and the suspicion is growing here that the two totalitarian forces may be secretly uniting for domination of the great Eurasian heartland.

Childs

It is, as yet, only conjecture. But the possibilities inherent in the union of Russian resources, including Russian manpower, and German efficiency and technology, each with its own system of ruthless and total controls, is appalling.

In the immediate present is Premier Stalin's bid to the German people on the basis of unlimited nationalism. Nazis in the Eastern Zone not only have been given full rights but have been put into positions of power in the new government created by the Russians. One example is Georg Dertinger, Foreign Minister in the new setup, who helped to build fascism in Germany.

In the recent past the Soviet Union formed the Free Germany Committee around Field Marshal von Paulus and other high officers captured at Stalingrad. They were used for propaganda appeals to the German people during the war and rumor has linked them to the formation of a new German army in the Eastern Zone.

But back of this is earlier history of collaboration between the Soviet Union and Germany. After World War I it was Junker officers who helped to direct the formation of the Russian army.

IT WAS always the concept of one of the most powerful figures in the revival of German might—General von Seeckt—that collaboration with the Russians was essential. As Von Seeckt argued on every possible occasion, such collaboration was necessary, above all, for the development of the great industrial complex in China. Von Seeckt was largely responsible for sending a military mission, headed by General von Falkenhausen, to help train Chiang Kai-shek's army.

"Give me 100,000 German civil servants and 100,000 officers and men and I will show how to organize China," Von Seeckt often said.

Today there are signs that new collaboration may be developing. Some leaders in the Free Germany Committee have come back to lead extremist parties in Western Germany. A conspicuous example is Gen. Vincenz Mueller, head of the Nazilike National Democratic Union.

Others are said to have gone to China, where along with Russian observers they are attached to headquarters of Communist military leaders. According to one source, Von Paulus himself is in Peiping, although another report has it that he has been relegated to comparative obscurity in Russia because he did not fulfill the expectations of Soviet leaders.

Back of all this speculation is the solid fact that the owners and managers of German industry want to find an outlet for their products and their skills in eastern Europe and Asia.

These are the same owners and managers who helped to build up Hitler. They are believed to be the source of continuing feelers for understanding with the new East German state which is the creature of the Soviet Union.

Incidentally, major forces opposing such an agreement are the Social Democrats and the trade union leaders. These men, who are truly democratic and anti-Communist, could never come to terms with an utterly subservient regime masterminded by Moscow.

IT IS EASY, of course, to read too much theory into what is happening today. The Prussian officer class surviving World War II has only one object in life, and that is to fight. It is natural, therefore, that they should seek an outlet for their evil talents in China, where a war is going on.

A serious obstacle to a political understanding or even to a working agreement between the Soviet bosses and the Prussian military class is the fact that a large slice of eastern Germany went to Poland and another slice was annexed by the Soviet Union. For Moscow to try to reverse that partition would be to create a dozen Titos in eastern Europe. And even in a temporary partnership it would be difficult or impossible to suppress the German nationalistic desire for the return of such cities as Breslau and Stettin.

Stalin, as a completely uncompromising realist, must know that the Soviet Union does not have the technology to direct the organization of chaotic China. He knows, too, that German scientists have contributed heavily to Russian development since the end of the war.

So, if the decision rested with the Kremlin, the probability would be for a carefully calculated deal providing effective collaboration.

That pact surprised and shocked them so severely they scrambled off in dismay and despair. But it was in complete accord with the power concept of the totalitarian state.

Soviet Aided Coup, Czech Leader Says

Prague, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—President Klement Gottwald declared today that only Russia's "mighty protection" made it possible for the Czech Communist Party to seize power in this country last year.

In a speech formally launching Soviet-Czech friendship week, Gottwald called on all patriotic Czechs to send birthday greetings to Russian Premier Josef Stalin. He called on his countrymen to celebrate the anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution with "joy and enthusiasm."

Gottwald said small nations of eastern Europe never would have been able to maintain their independence without "political and economic help" from Russia.

Education Minister Zdenek Nejedly told the school children of Czechoslovakia they must learn to love both Russia and Stalin.

"Long live, blossom and strengthen our ally, the guarantor of freedom and the socialist future of our fatherland—the Soviet Union!" Gottwald said in conclusion, "long live the beloved leader of laboring people of the entire world—Comrade Stalin!"

Laborite Peer Predicts Vote On July 6

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—Labor Peer Lord Calverley — the former George Muff of Hull—tonight said British general elections would be held July 6. But he later indicated he was just making a prediction with no knowledge of the date.

His statement set off a flurry in government offices. Prime Minister Attlee refused to confirm or deny the peer's statement. The Prime Minister asked one of his secretaries to investigate what had taken place.

Lord Calverley, a Laborite since 1919, who was made a baron in 1945, said at the end of a speech in the House of Lords:

"I venture to say that when the general election comes on Thursday, July 6, 1950, the noble lords opposite will still be sitting opposite," indicating his belief the Conservatives would still be sitting on opposition, not government, benches.

Later he told reporters: "The date I have mentioned is just five years after the last general election. I have been right in forecasting the date of every general election except 1931 and in my forecasts of all seats won and lost."

Asked if the date was a guess, he said, "I know as much as you do."

All responsible Labor Party leaders who could be reached, including Morgan Phillips, the secretary, denied any knowledge of the setting of an election date.

An election must be held before next July 25, the fifth anniversary of Attlee's first day in office.

British Trade Unionists Confer on Wage Freeze

London, Nov. 2 (NYHT).—Top British trade unionists today tackled the critical problem of an absolute wage freeze for Britain's eight million organized workers.

The special economic committee of the Trades Union Congress met today, but was unable to agree on a plan. It will meet again Monday. Its recommendations will be passed on to the general council of the TUC next Wednesday.

Tito Warns Albania On Treaty Violations

Belgrade, Nov. 2 (AP).—In a note just short of an ultimatum, Yugoslavia tonightly sternly "cautioned" little Albania to live up to its treaty obligations with Marshal Tito's country.

The note demanded in the most abrupt terms that Albania "answer this note in the shortest possible time."

It listed a long series of complaints against Albania, including alleged border provocations, frontier shootings, persecution of Yugoslav citizens in Albania and espionage by Albanian agents in Yugoslavia.

The note referred to the fact that Albania alone of Russia's satellites has not denounced her Yugoslav pact of friendship and alliance. But, the communication said, "it may be seen from the facts that the Albanian government has violated its treaty obligations and is continuing along its way in increasingly drastic form."

It was not sufficient that Albania hold fast to the treaty, the note said, and concluded with these direct words:

"The Yugoslav government cautions the Albanian government to return to a policy of friendship and cooperation with Yugoslavia, to respect and carry out its obligations under its treaty of friendship and alliance.

"The Yugoslav government considers it desirable that the Albanian government answer this note in the shortest possible time."

The note, handed to the Albanian foreign office in Tirana today, was the toughest-talking that has yet been exchanged in the bitter war of ideologies that broke out more than 16 months ago

Yugoslavia Asks U. N. to Admit Foes

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Yugoslavia today denounced its four Cominform neighbors for allegedly plotting to overthrow the Tito regime, but urged their admission to the United Nations in the hope this would persuade them to "change their ways."

Yugoslav Delegate Josip Djerdja made his statement to the General Assembly's Special Political Committee as it sought a way out of the East-West impasse over admission of some 14 nations whose bids have been blocked by Soviet vetoes—in nine cases—and Western majorities—in the other five.

U. N. deliberations today brought these other developments:

1. The United States and Britain held an important, top-level conference on the Italian colonies question as the danger rose of complete collapse of efforts to settle the problem.

2. Albania and Bulgaria consumed almost two whole sessions of the main Political Committee denouncing Anglo-American policy in Greece.

3. U. N. officials and delegates hailed the Dutch-Indonesian agreement on creation of a sovereign Indonesia tied to the Dutch crown.

Hoffman Fears A 'Dark Age'

calling for a 50 percent cut in quota restrictions on private imports included also a warning against a raise in tariffs to counter the elimination of quotas and called for reports by December 15 on measures taken to relax barriers to invisible trade.

Other paragraphs in the resolution call for promoting wider currency transferability when the next drawing-rights scheme is planned; for a report from the OEEC executive committee on ways to eliminate dual pricing on domestic and export markets; for a report from members that plan regional economic arrangements; and for further study of ways to absorb surplus manpower in certain countries—Italy in particular.

Soviet Zealously Conceals Economy Flaws To Save Official Story of Worker's Heaven

(Second in a Series)

By Joseph Newman

Paris, Nov. 2 (NYHT).—In July, 1947, the Moscow Peoples Court sentenced Citizen S. Burlakov, a worker, to 10 years prison at hard labor for stealing 18 baby's diapers.

The same court sentence Citizen M. Stikyanova to eight years for running off with Citizen Solodovnikova's dress while she was taking a public bath. A man and a woman who stole vegetables from a garden were condemned to six and eight years, respectively. Most of these and numerous similar stories, all matters of public record in Moscow, were not allowed to be transmitted abroad to foreign readers.

The official censor, by his sharp reaction, revealed that we had touched one of the most sensitive spots in the Soviet system. Reports about waste, defective goods, shortages, bureaucracy, maladministration and crime also were taboo. But over a period of time we had press reports from all over the Soviet Union that these were more widespread than we had generally believed.

It was clear why these reports had to be suppressed and why the foreigners could not be permitted to wander freely about the country to run into these conditions.

Viacheslav M. Molotov, then Foreign Minister, announced in November, 1947, that the Soviet Union had recovered the prewar level of industrial production. The Soviet press and radio began proclaiming to the world that the Russian worker was not only much better off than before the Bolshevik revolution but he was better off than the exploited worker in capitalist countries. That being the case, press reports, even if they were Soviet, could not be allowed to contradict this picture.

But the flaws, no matter how hard they are suppressed, remain.

There are countless reports of waste of Soviet labor and materials. Their cumulative impact and significance suggest that the waste in the planned Soviet system may be greater than in the unplanned capitalist country.

Comrade N. Tikhomirov, chief of the Moscow Trade Department, publicly announced (but not for transmission abroad) that "one would be ashamed to show a customer much of what the Moscow city light industry produces."

Comrade A. Sukhanov, director of the Moscow Central Department Store, announced that one million rubles worth of goods he had just received were unfit for public sale. Only 80 out of an order for 200 ladies' coats met specifications.

At Sverdlovsk, the heavy industrial center in the Urals, 500 million rubles' worth of consumers goods were offered at public sale. The Soviet press reported that only 170 million rubles' worth were sold. The rest was unfit for sale.

Comrade I. Kachanov, director of a Vilnus store, complained to the local procurator that the shoes he had received from the factory were falling apart.

In December, 1948, the newspaper Moscow Bolshevik attacked a cooperative for stocking two million rubles' worth of shoe polish which soiled shoes instead of cleaning them.

Another organization was stuck with 600,000 rubles worth of flypaper to which flies wouldn't stick; 500,000 rubles worth of radio sets which didn't work because parts were missing and 100,000 rubles worth of valerian drops which didn't help any one's nervous system in the current situation.

The waste goes beyond the field of labor. Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, reported in 1947 that fruits and vegetables were spoiling on open platforms of stations in the southwestern, North Caucasian, Moscow-Kiev, Tashkent, Ashkhabad and Turkestan-Siberian railway lines. Obviously this was due to a lack of railway and motor transport, but the magazine Bolshevik disclosed soon afterward that 20 percent of railway rolling stock was idle and the figure for motor transport was even higher.

There was a purge of railway officials, some sentenced to heavy prison terms. There was also a purge of industrial officials and engineers because of faulty production.

Nine months later the situation was hardly better and in December, 1948, there was another purge of industrial executives and engineers.

This is a pattern which runs regularly through the history of the planned economic system of the Soviet Union. It is one which foreigners are not invited to examine.

At about the same time the official newspaper Izvestia reported that millions of rubles were being spent on guarding freight. The Agriculture Ministry alone spent 20 million rubles for this purpose in 1947; the Ministry of State Farms spent 10 million rubles, and the Ministry of Eastern Coal Industry five million rubles.

In the ideal Soviet state, where the worker gets what he needs, the question naturally arises why such large sums of money must be spent on police guards for freight cars, railway lines and warehouses to protect the fruits of Soviet labor from the Soviet laborer.

The waste, corruption, maladministration, inefficiency, theft and the need to maintain a large police force all help explain what one sees with his eyes—that the Russian is still one of the poorest supplied workers in the world.

But these conditions, compounded many times by the denial of civil liberties, must be concealed from the outside world to uphold the official story that the Soviet worker not only has approached but already has entered workers' heaven, to which the oppressed workers of the world are invited to follow him.

Election Death Toll Mounting In Colombia

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 2 (AP).—Some 235 Colombians have been killed in the past 24 hours in a mounting wave of preelection violence, the newspaper El Liberal said today.

[The United Press said heavily armed marines took over the harbor town of Cartagena tonight as the newspaper El Tiempo reported that midshipmen of the Colombian school ship Almirante Padilla and police fought in the port of Santa Marta over charges of mistreatment.

[Police ordered the population of Cartagena indoors at 7 p. m.

A government announcement said military maneuvers had been ordered by the army high command.]

Both Liberal and Conservative newspapers carried reports of clashes in the interior as violence increased with the approach of the presidential election, set for November 27.

El Liberal said that in three towns in the Valle department, about 150 persons were killed and 30 wounded when "Conservative bandits" attacked the region, burning down houses, stealing cattle and destroying crops.

The Conservative paper El Siglo said "about 2000 armed Liberal bandits" is terrorizing the Valle and Cundinamarca departments. It said that at Vellta a Conservative was "hanged and burned."

Colombian Government Says Tranquility Prevails

Eduardo Zuleta-Angel, Ambassador from Colombia, said here yesterday that he had received the following cable from his government:

"As we have learned that several news agencies are endeavoring to divide inaccurate and alarmist news unfavorable to Colombia, we wish to inform that in the country there prevails the natural political expectancy resulting from the proximity of the presidential elections and the recent congressional debates, but public order is being inalterably maintained, with complete tranquility, and all civic activities are being carried out normally. Signed: The President of the Republic—The Minister of Foreign Affairs."

Author Has Spent Two Years in Russia

Africans Repel Police 3d Time

Johannesburg, South Africa, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Armed police failed for the third time today to break into the native quarter of Krugersdorp, 20 miles from Johannesburg, in face of a bombardment of stones and revolver shots.

Three persons have been killed and many wounded in two days of rioting that started because natives misunderstood the word "could" in new government employment regulations and thought it meant "must."

The new regulations specified that native women "could" register with city authorities. Some natives erroneously thought this meant that all native women must register and carry passes. A spontaneous strike started yesterday morning and rioting followed when strikers stoned other natives working on public works projects.

In their third attempt to break into the native quarter this morning, the police advanced under covering fire of revolvers, rifles and Sten guns. But the police were thrown back.

Late today word spread of the mistake in interpreting "could" as "must." A number of the natives went back to work and the government promised consideration of all complaints.

Sterling Area, Japan Draft Trade Accord

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—Official sources said today a 135-million-pound (378 million dollars) one-year trade agreement between Japan and the sterling area is ready to be signed in a few days.

The agreement was negotiated with General MacArthur's staff with the aid of the Japanese government.

It provides for the elimination of the 10 million pound (28 million dollars) trade deficit with Japan last year which otherwise would have to be paid in scarce dollars.

The main item Japan will supply is raw silk. Since the war Britain has been supplying her silk industry from the United States. This took dollars.

In return for silk, textiles, toys and bicycles to Britain, Australia, India, Pakistan and Burma, Japan will receive petroleum, wool, rice, salt, machinery and consumer goods.

Indonesia Pact Signed

ber, oil, spices, sugar, tin and other raw materials.

Dr. Mohamed Hatta, Prime Minister of the Indonesian Republic, one of the signatories, regarded the day's events with optimism.

"On this historic moment," he said, "the Indonesian people will feel a great relief."

Dutch New Guinea is still a matter of dispute. The Indonesians want to incorporate the Dutch half of the great island into the new republic. When failure to agree threatened to put the 10-week round-table conference on the rocks, both sides accepted a United Nations proposal to permit the Dutch to govern it for another year. Meanwhile, during 1950, new attempts will be made to settle the question by negotiation.

The papers gave all nations equal rights in Indonesia's trade and industrial progress. The Dutch, however, won recognition of their "special interests" in the islands.

Both countries indicated they were prepared to consider a system of "mutual, preferential" trade relations.

Under the union, the Dutch and Indonesians will exchange high commissioners with the rank of ambassador. Union conferences will be held twice a year with three Dutch and three Indonesian cabinet ministers participating.

It's Seventh Republic Formed Since War

The Hague, Nov. 2 (AP).—The United States of Indonesia is the seventh independent nation established with a republican form of self-government since the war.

They are Indonesia, India, Pakistan, Burma, Ceylon, Korea and Israel.

Within eight months after the establishment of the provisional Indonesian Parliament, interparliamentary conferences are to be arranged.

To settle any disputes, a union court of arbitration will be set up, with three members from the Netherlands and three from Indonesia. The International Court of Justice may be asked to appoint a seventh nonunion member in deadlock.

The military agreement provides for a Dutch military mission to help build the Indonesian army.

It left open the possibility of mutual aid in the event of war.

The United Nations Commission for Indonesia, or its successor, is to cooperate in the Dutch military evacuation.

In the financial and economic clauses, the signatories agreed that "on no account shall the citizens and corporate bodies of either of the partners receive within the jurisdiction of the other partner treatment less favorable than citizens and corporate bodies of a third state."

347-Year Rule By Dutch Ends

By The Associated Press

The Netherland East Indies was formed 347 years ago during a period of swashbuckling commercial adventurism which swept from Europe. Driven out of the trade with Portugal by the Spanish, the Dutch headed to the east. There they found the Indonesian archipelago, rich in the goods which Europe wanted.

To protect their adventurer-merchants, who were fighting among themselves, with the Portuguese and with the natives, the Dutch East India Company was formed in 1602, with headquarters at Batavia in Java.

At the peak of its prosperity the East India Company had a fleet of more than 100 ships, kept a small army of soldiers and was returning the burghers of Holland a fat profit of 40 percent on their investments.

Indonesian nationalism flourished under the Japanese occupation of World War II. The British, who liberated the islands at the Japanese surrender, immediately found themselves in trouble. Headed by President Soekarno, the Indonesian Republic proclaimed its rule over all the former Dutch possessions.

The British finally withdrew and large-scale fighting, with the Indonesians relying on guerilla tactics, broke out July 21, 1947, when the Dutch began their first "police action" against the republic. The Dutch occupied large areas of Java and Sumatra before the United Nations Security Council ordered a cease-fire after 4 days.

With the aid of a U. N. commission, negotiations led to the Renville truce agreement of January 17, 1948, signed aboard an American Navy ship in Batavia harbor. The agreement went into the discard on December 18, 1948, when the Dutch began a second "police action" in which parachutists seized the republican capital of Jogjakarta and captured most of the Indonesian cabinet.

China Reds Suppress Facts, U. S. Says

The State Department accused Chinese Communist authorities of suppressing the facts behind the arrest of American Consul General Angus Ward at Mukden 10 days ago.

Two new dispatches from the Mukden Consulate informed the department that on Monday Ward still was imprisoned, along with four members of his staff. The department believed they still were being held.

Consulate officials had not been permitted to see them, but had supplied food, heavy clothing and bedding.

Ward was accused of having "brutally beaten" a Chinese employe.

D. C. Nonchain Sales Drop 1% In September

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined dollar volume of Washington independent retailers in September showed a 1 percent decline under the same 1948 month, the Census Bureau reported yesterday.

However, the total was 18 percent higher than in August. For the first nine months this year, the dollar volume here was reported 2 percent improved over the like period last year.

Only 3 of the 13 categories displayed sales gains in September. These were food stores, auto dealers and filling stations. Drug store volume showed remarkable stability, both for the month and the nine-month period.

Sharpest declines were in women's apparel, photo-camera, lumber-building equipment, hardware and drinking places.

Individual trades fared as follows for September and the first nine months compared with similar 1948 period:

Shop in SHIRLINGTON Tonight 'til 9 o'clock

MANY OF THE 48 STORES OPEN LATE FRIDAY NIGHT, TOO!

Three things make a business center . . . selection, value and convenience. Shirlington is America's Fastest Growing Business Center because Shirlington was planned to give shoppers all three! All 48 modern stores were built on 3 city blocks; and the stores located there were purposely chosen to give you the widest possible variety of fine merchandise. Parking is a problem to many shoppers these days, so Shirlington was built with 3 huge free parking lots. And as for value . . . the people who drive 10,000 cars into Shirlington each day (more on Saturdays), the thousands more who come to Shirlington by bus or on foot . . . all testify to the wonderful values thrifty shoppers find in Shirlington! Tonight all 48 Shirlington stores are open 'til 9 P.M.; tomorrow many of the stores are open late also. Be sure to visit Shirlington and take advantage of this extra convenience, selection and value.

ed before the President signed the bill last week.

Seckinger, obviously happy over his appointment, told reporters yesterday he was "deeply appreciative to the Commissioners for their confidence."

He had no comment as to whom he may reccomend as his new assistant or on any changes he plans for the department.

He did list what he considered to be some of the major tasks facing the Health Department. Some of them are: building up Gallinger Hospital's services, including housing for personnel, out-patient clinic service and pediatric and laboratory services; extension of health center services; developing a program for home care of chronically ill medically indigent, a major effort against diseases affecting middle-aged and older persons.

Seckinger holds degrees of doctor of medicine and doctor of public health from Johns Hopkins University. His son, Daniel, jr., is a premedical student at George Washington University.

A native of Rincon, Ga., Seckinger acquired most of his public health experience in his native State before coming to Washington in 1935. At the time of his appointment as Ruhland's assistant, he was director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases and chief epidemiologist for the State Board of Health at Atlanta.

He was acting superintendent of Gallinger Hospital here from 1943 to 1945, but declined a permanent post there to return to the Health Department.

American but because a still small voice within us tells us this is the man we want."

Povl Bang-Jensen, a friend of the late Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor who died last January, said he arose to "show you what a foreigner looks like," and received a loud ovation.

Jensen, of the Danish Embassy, declared:

"This is a House of God. I am satisfied that if Docherty is a man of God, that he speaks the way God wants him to speak."

Verne C. Boneseteel, acting chairman of the committee on pastor, reported on favorable letters he received in reply to inquiries about the good character of Mr. Docherty. Attorney Edward J. Dumbauld declared: "We should feel contrition and humility for having brought disgrace to this man in the newspapers of Scotland (by false accusations he is a Socialist)."

The congregation voted to give the new pastor an $8000 salary, a manse and a six-week annual vacation.

Plane Crash Probe Begun

Aeronautics Organization. Doctors yesterday confirmed he had a broken back, two broken ribs and severe laceration.

Bridoux suffered a serious setback in Alexandria Hospital last night, where previously he had been reported as not in danger. Dr. Carson L. Fifer, his personal physician, said he rallied from the attack, but his condition was not so good as it had been earlier.

Other members of the investigating group will include William K. Andrews, CAB safety investigation director; Robert W. Crisp, hearing and reports division chief; Irvin N. Townsend, chief of accident investigation, and Joseph O. Fluet, chief of CAB Region I with headquarters in New York.

Public hearings on the cause of the disaster will begin "as soon as possible," probably early next week, CAB officials said.

The task of recovering bodies continued relentlessly yesterday, marked by a general feeling of futility because of knowledge there were no survivors.

The rear half of the liner's fuselage, which had crashed between the river's edge and Mount Vernon Memorial hwy. after the plane was cut in two, was removed from the shore at 4 p. m. by an Air Force crane and trailer-truck.

Workers anxiously turned their attention to a spot 50 to 75 yards offshore where a Navy Gun Factory barge and crane were jockeying into position to recover the other half of the plane.

It was believed the forward end of the liner would produce the nine missing bodies.

The shattered section of the fuselage, still attached to the wing and one of the plane's three wheels, came up. The nose and four engines had apparently been sheared off.

The bulk yield only a man's leg, two bundles of clothing and several shoes before the barge carried it to the Naval Gun Factory, where the search for remains was continued.

Among the wreckage taken ashore by Harbor Police was a book in Spanish, entitled "Pedro Emelio Anecdotas," or "a collection of Anecdotes on Pedro Emelio."

Two sacks of mail floated to the river surface as the load was lifted. One was addressed to Spartansburg, S. C., the other to Charlotte, N. C.

The aircraft left Boston early Tuesday morning and came to Washington via New York. It was bound for New Orleans. The crash occurred at 11:46 a. m.

Red Cross units from Alexandria and the District maintained volunteer motor services and canteens on the river bank while the search continued under floodlights last night.

Besides dispensing hot coffee and sandwiches to workers, the Red Cross kept a mobile telephone and two-way radio available for emergency calls.

Along with Alexandria and Metropolitan police, the Alexandria Fire Rescue Squad was the only unit that remained overnight Tuesday at the scene.

At least 30 members of the squad—most of them volunteers—have been there since shortly after the crash, going without sleep to assist in the work.

One is H. A. Dugan, 48, of 206 E. Raymond st., Alexandria, president of the squad. At 5:30 last night, his wife said, she sent word for him to come home for dinner. He refused to leave, she said, until the job is over.

NYHT News Service

Government and air line legal experts agreed yesterday that the families of 51 airline passengers who were killed here Tuesday probably have no financial recourse against the company in whose liner they were riding.

Only if the Bolivian government assumes responsibility for the accident and agrees to be sued, they said, is it likely that relatives of the victims will ever collect any damages.

Crash Dead Identification Continues

The gruesome process of identification of the victims in Tuesday's Eastern Airliner crash was reaching completion last night as rescue workers sped efforts to recover last victims from the Potomac River.

At the District Morgue, bodies of the plane victims were placed on stretchers on the second floor, where relatives or friends went to identify them.

In Alexandria identifications were made at funeral homes where the bodies were sent.

Eastern Air Lines officials said the bodies of all women named on the passenger list had been recovered before midnight. Two of them had not been positively identified. There were three men's bodies to be recovered to complete the total of 55 persons known to be aboard the plane.

Here is the list of the crash victims, with the latest information available on them.

Restriction Asked on Private Pilots

In the wake of Tuesday's airliner crash at National Airport, a demand was voiced in Congress and by the Air Line Pilots Association yesterday that noncommercial planes be restricted at major airports.

Representative Thomas J. Lane (D., Mass.), declared that "military planes must be barred from commercial airports to prevent a repetition of Tuesday's mass murder."

Lane telegraphed Representative Robert Crosser (D., Ohio), chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, from Boston, asking for a "searching investigation" of the crash.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) urged new curbs on military plane flights on commercial airways. Johnson said the Senate Commerce Committee which he heads is asking the Civil Aeronautics Administration for a full report on the crash.

The Air Line Pilots Association (AFL), demanded "changes in air traffic procedures and use of flying fields that will give scheduled airline aircraft right of way priority over all other planes, military or othewise, transporting people not for hire."

David L. Behncke, ALPA president, in a statement issued in Chicago, also advised "reestablishment of the independent Air Safety Board as the watchdog of safety."

Post to Take Bus Radio Vote

the Capital Transit Co. had swung way too low when they tuned up to music, news, weather, time announcements and commercials.

There was the opposing group who held that with public transportation vehicles converted to bandwagons, everyone should get on board and ride happily ever after.

Somewhere between these extremes were the thousands who avoid public hearings, keep their views to themselves, and travel through voteless Washington with never a chance to register their likes or dislikes by ballot.

Their views could be reached by Sunday's ballot.

Expression of Opinion

There is no thought that the tabulation of the ballots will give the last word, or determine the PUC's decision. But the results will be there for the PUC to consider, and for the public to measure against the final decision, whatever it is.

Neither is there any thought that the informal balloting could produce a final and statistically accurate expression of the public sentiment in the District area. Statisticians could point out flaws in the results to be obtained from unregulated balloting. The aim is simply to secure as wide an expression of public opinion as feasible.

The PUC now has various measure of public opinion on the transit radio issue.

By letter and telephone 371 individuals notified the PUC they opposed radio, while 136 gave word they approved it. Seventeen citizens associations indorsed the radio plan, and four opposed it. Three petitions brought in a total of 255 signatures for the radio setup. There were also indorsements of radio from several other groups, including the GAO local of the National Federation of Federal Employes with 400 members; 14 members of the Natinoal Association of Letter Carriers, also from the American Federation of Government Employes, and the National Federation of Post Office Clerks. The Washington Industrial Union Council (CIO) said if radios were to be used, cars with and without the broadcasting should be identified.

The hearings brought forth indorsements for the radio plan from the Federation of Citizens Associations, plus four other civic groups, two other individuals, and a total of 14 witnesses for the transit and radio firms. Twenty-six persons testified as individuals against the use of radio, along with four others presented as witnesses for the opposition.

In addition to the box score, Capital Transit Co. presented the results of the studies made for it by a St. Louis marketing survey firm.

There were three main surveys, one of passenger sentiment in April, another of passenger sentiment in October, and a third of driver sentiment in October.

Main results in April were these: 2524 bus riders polled, 79.6 percent favored radio, 5.9 objected to it; 14.5 percent did not know or did not care. Of 1558 persons polled at bus stops, 82.2 percent favored radio; 8.9 percent objected to it; and 8.9 percent did not know or did not care.

In October, the polling was done in both streetcars and buses, but not at the stops. The poll covered 3434 persons, and of them 76.3 percent favored radio, 6.6 percent objected—3.6 percent would not object if the majority wanted it — and 17.1 percent did not know or did not care.

In the snrvey of Capital Transit operators, 294 operators were polled. Of them, 95.9 percent reported the radio did not interfere with safety, 2 percent said it did, and the others were decided. As for personal objections to radio, 88.1 percent had none, 3.4 percent did object, and the others had reservations. As for whether the radio made their jobs more pleasant, 74.5 percent said "yes," 8.5 percent said "sometimes," 2.4 percent said "no difference," 1.7 percent said "don't know" and 12.9 percent said "no."

The Post's ballot will tell how many are ready to vote for and how many against radio as you ride.

Be Bop Is 'Jiu-Jitsu' Music, Trumpeter Says

Paris, Nov. 2 (AP).—Jazz Trumpeter Louis Armstrong today said be bop is "nothing but mistakes."

"It comes from the sticks," he told a luncheon of the Anglo-American Press Association. "Those kids come to a passage they don't dare tackle, so they play a thousand notes to get around it. It's jiu-jitsu music. Nothing but squeezing and twisting notes."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

FOR SHEER enterprise, Ted Mann who is in the hire of Duke University, must be elevated to the No. 1 spot in any 1949 ranking of the college football publicists. He has clinched that honor with a new dodge in the midst of the propaganda season aimed at winning friends and influencing All-America selections.

POVICH

Mann is plumping strongly for Duke's veteran captain and tackle, Louis Allen, in a campaign calculated to devastate all doubt that Allen is a transcendant figure at the tackle spot. He submits not only literature that thumps the tub for Allen, but pictures to prove that his man is Whattaman.

Out of the movie films of Duke's games, Mann has confiscated the plays that show off Allen to advantage, and now is distributing them as still pictures to provide the critics with visual evidence of his man's superior talents.

"One picture is worth 10,000 words, according to the old Chinese proverb," writes Mann, "and in order to save you the job of wading through 40,000 words the enclosed four pictures will show you how No. 73 can block—and how!"

THUS MANN RISES above the old-fashioned horse-and-buggy technique of his fellow press agents who are still grinding out on their mimeograph machines the standard testimonials aimed at getting All-America attention for their candidates. And his pictures of Allen in action are, indeed, impressive, even the captions he provides.

Photo No. 1 shows No. 73 (that's Allen) throwing a key block on the last man between Halfback Jack Friedlund and a 35-yard touchdown run. There it is, the kind coaches teach, a beauteous cross-body maneuver that renders the foe hors de combat.

In Photo No. 2, Allen is leading the down-field blocking for Friedlund on another touchdown sprint, this time for 43 yards. Mann's cameras have stopped the action just as Allen ties into the last of the secondary, and he looks All-American all-over.

THE PICTURE PACKING the big punch, though, is photo No. 4. "And here, Allen gets not one—but two—men at the same time as Friedlund goes 40 yards to a touchdown." Honest, there it is for all to see, big Allen disposing of one defense man with a shoulder block just before creaming another one with his 210 pounds to the body.

Altogether, it could set a new style for ambitious college press agents eager to land their pet candidates on an All-America team. Allen's pictures make healthy exhibits. The Nation's camera's are going to be kept busy by the campus public relations staffs if Mann's maneuver succeeds in lifting Allen into All-America eminence, as well it might. He has scored with this department.

For the colleges such as Duke and the scores of others who can't quite edge into the national title picture, an All-America berth for one of its players is the consolation prize. The coach may have no winning season, but the year is a success for the team's press agent if he can produce an All-American, what with the competition among publicists being what it is.

ACTUALLY, Mann doesn't come right out and stump for his man Allen as an All-America choice. That, apparently, would be a bit gauche in these days when such concerted campaigns more often alienate the selectors than influence them. Mann takes a different tack. He puts his campaign for Allen on the basis of the fellow's likelihood of making good in pro football. It may be thin disguise, but it gets the point across.

"We are proud of the fact," writes Mann, "that men we have recommended from Duke over the years—Fred Crawford, Ace Parker, George McAfee, Steve Lach, Al DeRogatis—have all made great records in pro football. We this year recommend another—Louis Allen, greatest blocker in Duke history, greatest man at covering punts since All-American Fred Crawford in 1933."

Louis Eugene Allen weighs 210, stands 6-feet-3, is a senior from Greensboro, N. C. Even before he made his first letter at Duke, he was famous in a mild sort of way. In the three decades Wallace Wade has been coaching football, Allen was the first freshman ever to win a regular job on a Wade team. Yeah, Mann!

Interhigh Title Game Slated Night Of Nov. 25

The Interhigh football championship game will be played under the lights at Griffith Stadium the night of November 25, with The Washington Post and the Board of Education teaming up as sponsors.

The Shriners of Almas Temple will serve up the entertainment for the biggest schoolboy sports attraction of the year, and will present a cup to the winning team.

Paired off in the title game will be the champions of the Northern and Southern Divisions of Interhigh League, 1-9.

Races in the two divisions are still wide open with Anacostia, Wilson and Eastern scrapping for the Southern title, and Central, McKinley Tech and Coolidge fighting for the Northern pennant.

Third Under Lights

This year's game, which occurs on the Friday after Thanksgiving, will be the third Interhigh championship game to be played under the lights.

In 1946, the first year that The Washington Post joined the schools in sponsorship, the title game grew up almost overnight into a big community party.

A crowd of 18,571, largest ever to see a scholastic game here, turned out to see Coolidge beat McKinley Tech, 18-6, at night and they contributed $20,000 to the Children's Hospital. Bobby Rohr scored all three Coolidge touchdowns.

In 1947, McKinley Tech and Central fought it out for the title with 16,641, the second largest local schoolboy crowd in history, watching. Tech, unscored on until that big game, yielded a touchdown, but won the championship, 14-7.

Tickets on Sale Monday

Last year, Central was undefeated, wrapped up the title early and no playoff was held.

To assure a championship game this year, the league was divided into the Northern and Southern divisions, each consisting of five teams.

Tickets for this year's classic go on sale Monday at all the public high schools and at the following places:

The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.

Almas Temple, 1513 K st. nw.

American Automobile Association, 17th and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Arlingtonian Has 18 Right, Wins Contest

A total of 24 grid fans picked 17 out of 20 winners in last week's Pick-the-Winners Contest of The Washington Post, but only one fan was right in 18 out of 20 selections.

Dudley

He is John C. Dudley, 23, of 102 North Trenton st., Arlington, who got the idea of entering the contest after winning an office pool at the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics.

Only recently graduated from DePauw University, in Green Castle, Ind., Dudley thus wins four tickets to Sunday's game between the Washington Redskins and Pittsburgh Steelers, plus two tickets and an all-expense-paid-trip to the Army-Navy game November 26.

His only miscalculations in last week's contest were in the Tennessee-North Carolina game and the 7-7 deadlock between Santa Clara and Stanford. Dudley picked the Tar Heels, who lost by 35-6, and Stanford.

For his probable score he picked S. M. U. to beat Texas, 26-23, the right winner and only 2 points off the actual 7-6 margin, but all of 36 points off the point total.

Of the 24 entries who had 17 correct picks, 11 had the right winner in their probable score and the rest figured Texas would win.

Two High Games Cancelled, Two Are Rescheduled

Sidwell-Friends School has canceled its game scheduled for Friday with Bethesda-Chevy Chase at Bethesda because of injuries to several players and the ineligibility of others due to scholastic work.

The Fairfax at Washington-Lee High game, postponed from last week, will be played at W-L Friday night, November 18, at 8 o'clock.

The St. John's-Georgetown Prep game originally scheduled for Sunday will be played Saturday night at 8 o'clock at the George Washington High School Stadium in Alexandria.

Woodward Prep has canceled its Friday game with Bullis High because of injuries to several of its players.

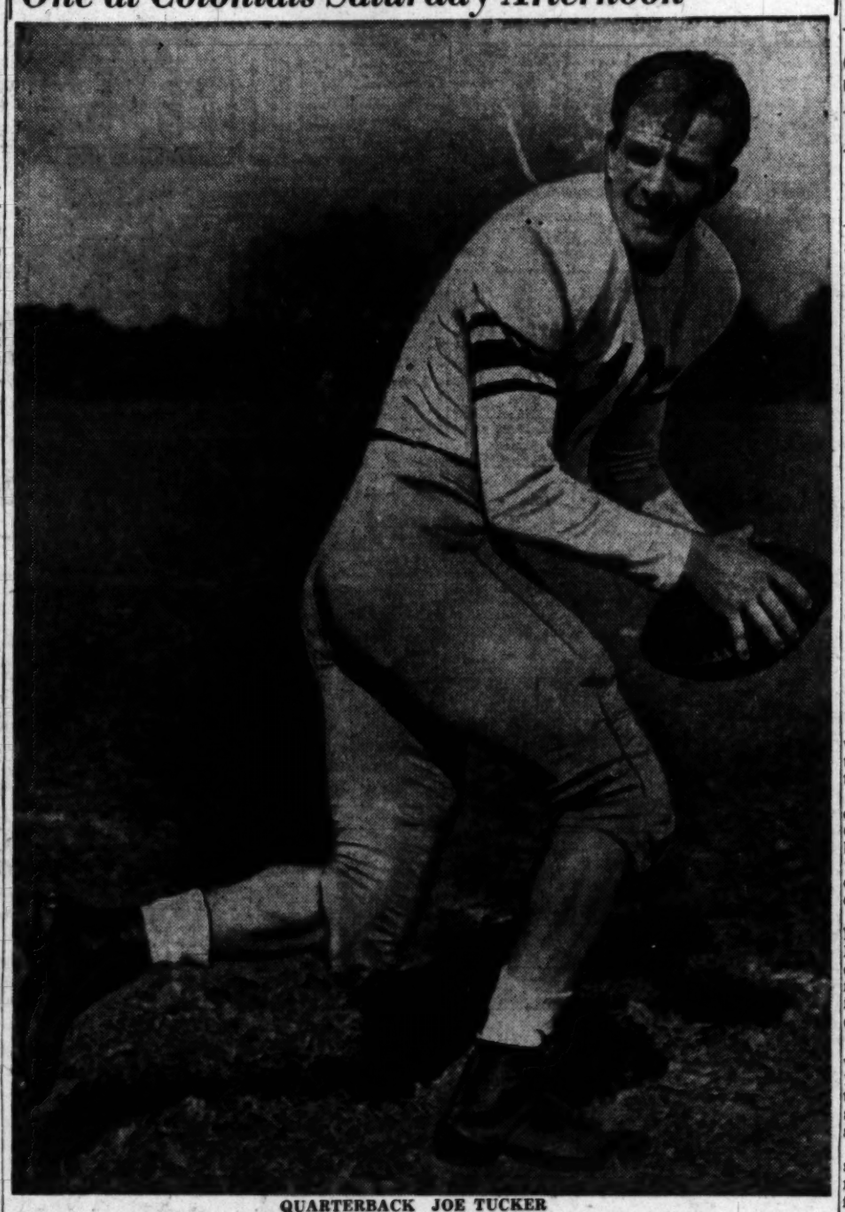
Terrapins' Tucker Will Wind Up, Fire Fast One at Colonials Saturday Afternoon



QUARTERBACK JOE TUCKER

Joe Used to Be Wild With Baseball, But He Has Control of Football

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Maryland's Joe Tucker, a failure as a baseball pitcher, will be on the throwing end of a football Saturday afternoon when the Terrapins go to work on George Washington at College Park.

Judging from Joe's passing performance against South Carolina last week when he completed nine out of twelve, the rangy Arlington, Va., senior has overcome his major baseball weakness, wildness.

In his Central High days, back in 1943, Joe had the big league scouts ga-ga with his fiery fast ball, but most of the time Tucker didn't know where the ball would land. In one three-inning stint against National Training School, Joe struck out 9 men, but walked 12.

Began as Guard

In those days Joe dabbled in football, too. He was a guard who stayed timidly in the shadow of his older brother, Hubert. Hubert was All-High for Central's 1943 championship team, but didn't make the grade at Maryland.

Joe followed his older brother to Maryland, and was a third-string guard under Clark Shaughnessy in 1946. Next year, Jim Tatum's first move was to shift the strong-armed sophomore to quarterback.

The story is told about the afternoon when Shaughnessy came to College Park to watch his former team work out. He spotted Tucker on one side of the field, throwing the ball around.

"Where'd Tatum bring that boy in from," Shaughnessy is reputed to have asked. "He can really throw that ball. Wish I'd had him last year."

"Don't you recognize him," a bystander replied. "He was one of your reserve guards last year."

Nats in Bidding For St. Louis' Priddy, Dillinger

Nats' President Clark Griffith said yesterday that he has entered bids for Second Baseman Jerry Priddy and Third Baseman Bob Dillinger of the St. Louis Browns.

Last week the Brownies announced that every one of their players over 28 years old was on the block. Priddy and Dillinger fall in that category.

"The Browns want a lot of players as well as a lot of cash," Griffith said yesterday, "and when I say cash, I mean a lot of cash."

The Nats once held title to Priddy, selling him to the Browns in 1947 after the hot-tempered second sacker had a run-in with Ossie Bluege, then Nats' manager.

Fan Assaulted At Game; Three Players Arrested

Chicago, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Three Montreal players were arrested and charged with assaults against spectators tonight after one fan was injured in a melee at the National League hockey game with Chicago at the Chicago Stadium.

Four spectators brought charges against Ken Reardon, Billie Reay, and Leo Gravelle, who were arrested at the end of the game and released on $50 bond each.

George Grbich of Chicago, a spectator, suffered a severe head cut fro ma blow with a hockey stick. He was given emergency treatment at the stadium. Seven stitches were needed to close the wound.

Reay and Gravelle entered the fray as other spectators pressed against the fence.

3675 See Norlander Scolari Lead Late Spurt

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The Caps made it an old story in a new league, taking the Baltimore Bullets, 66-61, in the local National Basketball Association opener last night at Uline before a crowd of 3675.

Two of the original four Caps still with the club, Freddie Scolari and Johnny Norlander applied the coup de grace to the battling Bullets.

Norlander, getting all 10 of his points in the second half, kept Washington in it in the third period. Fat Freddie waited until things got real tough and put on his sensational one-handed shooting act after the Bullets took a 51-50 lead in the fourth period.

Scolari Widens Margin

Big Jack Nichols, high scorer with 14, dropped the basket that regained the lead for the Caps. Scolari followed suit and Norlander tapped in one.

Then Freddie broke it wide open with three more baskets. By the time he'd finished, it was 63-54 and the Caps coasted.

Scolari and Norlander had to carry on for the old hands. Player-Coach Bob Feerick sat on the bench throughout and the other veteran, Bones McKinney, came in on crutches and watched the proceedings from a spectator's seat.

Paul Hoffman, back with the Bullets after laying off a year, and Buddy Jeannette, fiery player-coach, gave it the old Baltimore fight to keep things close until late in the game.

Gilmur Scores First

Hoffman wound up high man with 17 points and Jeannette had 13. Tommy Byrnes, acquired from the New York Knickerbockers, sparked the late Bullet rally that sputtered.

For pro basketball, it was a low-scoring game. In fact, it took a minute and 45 seconds before the first points were registered. The Caps' Chuck Gilmur had the honor of breaking the monotony.

The Bullets spurted into an early 17-9 lead but Leo Katkaveck, a vastly improved player, cut the edge with seven points and led the Caps to a 34-30 halftime advantage.

In the CYO preliminary, Blessed Sacrament won a 24-21 decision over St. Martin's.

Lakers Top Warriors; Pollard Scores 30

Casey Stengel 'Manager of Year' in Poll

By Joe Reichler

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Charles Dilon (Casey) Stengel, the frustrated dentist, today was voted baseball's "Manager Of The Year" in a poll conducted by the Associated Press.

The leathery, wrinkled 59-year-old veteran, who climaxed a 30-year career in baseball by leading the New York Yankees to a world championship, won in a proverbial breeze.

No other manager even came close. Casey was named on 101 of the 116 ballots cast by members of the Major League Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Only four other pilots received any sort of backing. Freshman Pilot Robert (Red) Rolfe of Detroit and youthful Eddie Sawyer of the Philadelphia Phillies tied for runner-up honors with six votes apiece.

Joe McCarthy, whose Boston Red Sox missed winning the American league flag on the final day, received two votes. Jack Onslow, who brought the Chicago White Sox up two notches from eighth to sixth, corralled the final vote.

Stengel earned top ranking because of the near-miracle he achieved in leading a team to a pennant in the face of an ever-mounting list of injuries and illnesses that at times threatened to tear the team apart.

It was a grateful and appreciative Casey Stengel who heard the news at Glendale, Calif.

"Well, well, that's really something," he said. "But remember it takes the ballplayers to push you up to where you get to be 'manager of the year.' I couldn't have done it with football players, you know."

Bill Veeck, owner of the Cleveland Indians, probably paid Stengel the greatest compliment of all when he said:

"If the Yankee players listened to Casey, I can assure you they have learned more baseball than they ever absorbed from any other pilot—yes, as much as the veterans ever got from Joe McCarthy."

Veeck should know about Stengel because Casey managed his Milwaukee club to an American Association pennant in 1944 and developed many players for the majors.

Stengel came to the Yankees with two strikes on him. He couldn't get out of the second division in three years in Brooklyn nor in six in Boston. In addition he had his reputation as a clown.

Coach Art Guepe Of Virginia Picks Penn to Win

COACH ART GUEPE, whose University of Virginia gridmen risk their unbeaten 1949 record against Penn Saturday, is not enchanted with their chances.

At least he strings along with the oddsmakers in picking the Quakers on The Washington Post's Pick-the-Winner Contest this week.

Guepe's other selections are Maryland over G. W. U., Tulane over Navy, Princeton over Harvard, Penn State over West Virginia, Wake Forest over Duke, North Carolina over William and Mary, W. and L. over Virginia Tech, Georgia Tech over Tennessee, L. S. U. over Vanderbilt, Illinois over Indiana, Minnesota over Iowa, Wisconsin over Northwestern, Ohio State over Pitt, Missouri over Colorado, Tulsa over Oklahoma A. & M., Texas over Baylor, Rice over Arkansas, Southern California over Stanford, and Army over Fordham.

For his probable score Guepe picks Notre Dame to swamp Michigan State, 33-7.

Players of the Week

CHARLES BROWN
Sidwell Friends

Sidwell Friends Football Coach Al Harringer paid Center Charlie Brown the supreme compliment a month ago by assigning him to call signals.

Charlie paid his coach back last Saturday by calling the right shots as Friends upset St. James of Hagerstown, Md., 20-12.

Although it's extremely unusual for a center to call the plays, that assignment isn't new to Brownie. He used to be a back, but Harringer thought he was a little too slow for a fast T formation. Besides Brownie proved himself to be a good snapper, blocker and tackler, and Friends was short on centers.

He's a durable lad, played the full 48 minutes in Friends' last two games. He recovered a fumble to set up Friends' game-clinching touchdown last week, and by the end of the game, St. James' runners were steering clear of Brownie's side of the field.

Brownie, Prep Player of the Week, and Roy Nelson, High Player of the Week, will be interviewed tonight at 6:15 on Bob Wolff's WINX sports program.

ROY NELSON
Central High

Roy Nelson is out of step in this age of football specialists.

The 18-year-old Central High senior plays end on offense, center on defense, and does both well.

Roy is short for an end, only 5 feet 10 inches, but he can get up in the air with the best of them to fight for those passes. He only weighs 160 but you'd never guess it to see his savage tackling when backing up the line.

Nelson teamed up with Lou Glickfield to provide Central with its 8-6 winning margin over Montgomery Blair last week. The two trapped Fred Everett behind the goal line for a safety.

Roy also broke through to block a Blair kick on the Blair 32 to set up Central's touchdown. Ray Luckett, Blair punter, pounced on the ball but was smothered on the 24 by a host of Central players again led by Nelson. The Vikings went over for the score in five plays from this point.

No wonder Central Coach Lou Chacos says, "We couldn't have won that game without Roy's stellar game on defense." WEST McLEAN.

Battleship 'Chase Today At Pimlico

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 2.—The twelfth running of the Battleship Steeplechase Handicap headlines the Maryland Jockey Club's program tomorrow and this 2-mile event for $7500 added has drawn a representative field of top flight infield performers.

Aside from the prospects of a scintillating contest with some of the best jumpers involved, there is the sentimental interest in the showing of Kent Miller's Elkridge, who won the Battleship as far back as 1942 and repeated that victory in 1945. No other horse has accomplished this feat although Good Chance won the first two runnings.

Robert Grant's Sun Bath and Mrs. S. C. Clark's Trough Hill will share top weight of 154 pounds in the Battleship as they head a field of eight.

Sun Bath has victories in the North American, Beverwyck, Saratoga and Broad Hollow to his credit, while Trough Hill won the Corinthian and the Brook. Both have been in the money in other important jump fixtures.

Next in line in the weights is Harry Lamontagne's Larky Day, winner of the Spring Maiden here and more recently a victor at Laurel. He's in at 152 while at 150 are Rokeby Stable's American Way and Elkridge.

Elkridge won the Meadowbrook, Georgetown and Indian River events this season, while American Way was successful in the Harbor Hill.

Brookmeade Stables' Fleettown, 146; Graham Grant's Luan Casca, 139, and Rigan McKinney's Hot, 137, complete the field. Fleettown's best stakes showing was a second in the International while Luan Casca and Hot have yet to land in the money in an added money feature.

However, Luan Casca was a galloping winner at Pimlico Tuesday so that at the weights both must be given a chance.

Mrs. Marion Dupont Scott, who owned Battleship when he won England's Grand National in 1938, is expected to be present to award the trophy in the race honoring her horse.

Seton Hall Plays Howard Booters

Seton Hall will bring its soccer team to Washington Thursday to take on Howard University. Both teams were undefeated last year and have dropped one game this season. The booters from South Orange, N. J., have outscored City College of New York, Kings Point, Muhlenburg, Trenton, Bridgeport and Brock Port. The game wil be played at the Howard Stadium at 2 p. m.

Former Athletes Attend Homecoming at Howard

All athletes who have won the varsity monogram while attending Howard University have been invited by the university to participate in the homecoming game against Hampton this Saturday afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

All who plan to attend the game should send their full name, address, year of graduation and sport participation to Robert L. White, 1251 Hamlin st., ne., or Joseph Cole, 1521 S st. nw.

Foul Claim Ruled Out By Stewards

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 2.—Whiffenpoof, named for the Old Eli college song, held on like a Yale Bulldog today and won the featured Baladier Purse, featuring the midweek program. The 3-year-old not only won in the actual running by a courageous nose but Jimmy Lynch, his jockey, was the victor in an argument after the finish.

Jockey Walter L. Taylor, who rode the favored Friendly Frank into second position, lodged a foul claim against Lynch, maintaining the latter's mount crowded the choice in the final stretch run. The stewards watched the movies and then allowed the result to stand.

Third money in the field of seven sophomores went to Mrs. Jimmy McGee's Wide Margin over High Ground Stable's Harburton.

First Win in Months

Whiffenpoof, in the colors of Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, visited the winner's circle for the first time in many months and had only scattered backing in the crowd of 10,000 paying a $22.80 mutuel. The gelding was clocked in 1:46 3/5 for the mile and a sixteenth over a good track.

It was a two-horse race from start to finish. Whiffenpoof took the lead early and Friendly Frank was always within striking distance. Approaching the stretch, the two came together and it was a dog-eat-dog battle from that point to the wire.

Friendly Frank took a neck advantage inside the eighth pole and appeared to have the situation well in hand. However, Lynch went to the whip, swinging with his left arm because he was crowded against the favorite. Wiffenpoof, if he had any thoughts of faltering, forgot them under pressure and came on to get up in the concluding jump.

Adaptable Takes 'Chase

Wiffenpoof came here after an unsuccessful campaign on the New York tracks. His victory was his third in 13 tries for this year.

Happy Hill Farm's Adaptable proved a worthy favorite in the day's steeplechase but had his legion of backers biting their most of the 2 miles over 14 jumps. Adaptable, ridden by Pat Smithwick, trailed the field until two jumps to go and then came around the opposition to win going away.

S. J. Clark's My Good Man was second with Langollen Farm's Artic Bound third in the field of seven. The winner paid $4.80 and was clocked in 4.04 2-5.

The daily double on Surprise Girl and Linda A. returned $249.80.

AT PIMLICO

DEAR FOLKS:

The Pimlico Futurity Feld gained an added starter over those previously named as likely to go when Trainer V. W. (Buddy) Raines announced that Brandywine Stable's Greek Song would be shipped here to fill his engagement in the mile and a sixteenth number for 2-year-olds on Saturday. Greek Song, a son of Heliopolis and Sylvan Song, was bred by the Greentree Stable. His lone previous stakes appearance this season was in the Remsen at Jamaica, in which he finishes eighth behind Lights Up. However, on October 29 he came back to win a maiden race at a mile and a sixteenth in 1:46 and off that showing, Raines figures his charge had a chance in the futurity.

Papit's 986 Yards Give Him Wide Lead in Ground-Gaining

For His Birthday

A Late Gift Would Tickle Margarita

Bob Margarita, head football coach at Georgetown University, has a birthday coming up today—his 29th. But he doesn't want his birthday present until tomorrow night.

That's when his Hoyas take on powerful Villanova in their homecoming game at Griffith Stadium. A victory over the Wildcats, who are 14-point favorites, would be all the youthful Margarita could ask.

He sent his team through a brief but rugged scrimmage, which it didn't expect, yesterday and then commented that "If the boys show improvement over that Fordham game, I'll be satisfied."

Asked if he thought Georgetown had a chance, he replied, "Darn right we have a chance. Don't worry, we'll show up for the game."

As a matter of fact, Georgetown has played better against teams it figured to be swamped by. It upset three of them—Holy Cross, Wake Forest and Boston College—before Fordham burst its bubble.

The Hoyas' strong point this season has been pass defense, but against Fordham it failed to intercept one toss for the first time all year. The Rams' Dick Doheny completed 11 of his 14 efforts, three of them for touchdowns.

In Steve Romanik, Villanova possesses one of the best tossers in the country. Romanik is seventh on total offense and twelfth in passing alone with 57 completions in 122 tries, 9 of them going for scores.

Virginia Ace Tops Drake Star Easily

Virginia's Johnny Papit, who starts churning against big-time opposition in his next three starts, maintains a comfortable lead as the Nation's leading ground-gainer.

According to National Collegiate Athletic Bureau figures, Papit holds a 222-yard advantage over Drake's Negro star, John Bright. And Papit has played one game less.

This Saturday, Philadelphian Papit gets a chance to display his running form before the home folks against Penn at Franklin Field. Papit's total of 986 yards from scrimmage is so good it places him seventh on total offense. He also is seventh on kick-off returns.

William and Mary's Buddy Lex is second on total offense with 1264 yards for the 191 plays in which he has figured. Charlie Justice is top punter with a 45.7 average for 43 boots.

Other area stars continued to maintain just about the same places.

Mexico Wins Jump Honors

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Mexico scored again tonight in the National Horse Show when Capt. Ruben Uriza, riding the chestnut gelding Hatuey, won the Dakota trophy for international military jumping.

Uriza beat out Capt. William Mullins of the Irish Army team and Capt. Oscar Cristi of the Chilean Carbineros in a jump-off after al had cleared the 10 stiff barriers cleanly the first time.

Party Miss, 8-year-old gray mare, won the Touch-and-Out event for open jumpers.

It required a jump-off between the mare, owned by George W. Fitzpatrick of Baltimore, and Ping Pong, stout little pinto gelding, owned by Morton W. Smith of Middleburg, Va., to determine the victor.

Celia Blevins Wins Over Ellen Olsen

Celia Blevins defeated Ellen Olsen in 15 minutes with a body press in the feature wrestling match before 1800 fans last night at Turner's Arena. In the semi-final, Marvin Mercer won in 20½ minutes with a reverse body scissors over Tony Martinelli.

In other matches, Joe Savoldi defeated Jack LaRue in 16½ minutes with a body scissors, Zeke Estep and Martin Karadigan wrestled to a 30 minute draw and Barney Barnard won in 16 minutes from Joe Kowalski with a body press.

Bearden Papa Again

Memphis, Nov. 2 (AP).—Gene Bearden, the Cleveland Indian pitcher, is a new papa. Mrs. Bearden gave birth to a 5½-pound girl here last night. The Beardens also have a 3-year-old son.

Redskins Prep For Steelers

The only "pure" single-wing offense remaining in the National Football League—and doing very nicely—continued to occupy the attention of Washington Redskin coaches yesterday as they prepared for Sunday's invasion of Griffith Stadium by the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Steelers, coached by Johnny Michelosen, have lost only two games this season and rank just under the Philadelphia Eagles in the Eastern division.

That one of the Steeler losses was administered by the Redskins, 27-14, isn't making the local forces over-confident. They had to overcome a 14-6 deficit for that triumph and they overcame it with passes by Slingin' Sammy Baugh, good for 35 and 58 yards.

The Steeler threat is topped by a couple of fancy ball-carriers, Jerry Nazum and George Papach, who have carried a total of 109 times for 559 yards, each averaging over 5 yards a trip. Three young passers—Joe Finks, Don Samuel and Joe Geri—figure strongly in Pittsburgh's confusing aerial game. And for punt returns the invaders have Bobby Gage, fleet-footed halfback from Clemson.

These youngsters operate behind a big and brutal forward wall, which has always given the Redskins a physical beating.

Roussos Joins Detroit Lions

Detroit, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Detroit Lions of the National Football League today acquired Mike Roussos, a 23-year-old tackle recently released by the Washington Redskins.

To make room for Roussos, the Lions granted an outright release to Tackle John Treadaway. The latter had been bothered by a recurring leg injury and also told Lions officials he wanted to devote full time to his trucking business in New York.

Sonny Boy in Final Drill for Prada

Sonny Boy West winds up his training for tomorrow's night's feature fight at Uline Arena with Alfredo Prada with a light workout this afternoon at 1:30 at the Liberty Athletic Club.

Four preliminaries are on the card. In the semifinal, Julian Keene, 20-year-old local middleweight gunning for his fourteenth straight win, takes on Richie Dallas of New York. Three fours have Johnny Pratt against Tex Newby, Miles Jones against Bill Coffield and Sam Kelsey against Morris Nelson.

Tom Hughes Wins In Rifle Shooting

Thomas Hughes of the Army Map Service shot a 286x300 to win first place in the weekly shooting of the National Capital Rifle Club yesterday at the club's range at 10 G st. ne.

Miss Audrey Blue, also of the May Service, wa ssecond. She also had a 286x300, but since the winner is determined on the offhand score, Hughes was declared the winner. Hughes' offhand score was 91, Miss Blue's 89.

Cooper Risks Title Shot

Jimmy Cooper's chances of meeting Manuel Ortiz, the world's bantamweight champion, next May at Griffith Stadium, with the title at stake, hinge on a victory over Charlie Titone, Brooklyn Italian, in their 10-round match next Monday night at Joe Turner's Arena.

Authority for that statement is Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, who made an unexpected visit to the Fifth Street Gym to watch Cooper work out yesterday.

Menendez told Cooper, Billy Banks, his manager-trainer, and other members of his staff that the outcome of the third bout with Titone holds the key to the bout.

Shaughnessy Accused

Halas Uses Movies to Back Claim Bears 'Wuz Robbed'

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—George Halas, owner-coach of the Chicago Bears, said today that movies of the Los Angeles Rams-Bears game Sunday "definitely proved" there was no interference on a disputed play. He claimed "the game was taken away from the Bears."

The Rams won the National Football League game, played at Los Angeles, 27-24.

Halas aimed a broadside at Coach Clark Shaughnessy of the Rams, accusing him of implying that Hugh (Shorty) Ray, Commissioner Bert Bell's assistant, was a "Halas man" and appointed officials.

"That is not the case," Halas said, "the commissioner appoints the officials."

Halas' formal statement said:

"The movies definitely substantiate the statement of John Hoffman, our fullback, that he did not interfere or face guard Vitamin Smit, Rams halfback, in the end zone at any time on the play which set up the winning touchdown.

"Back Judge Norman Duncan, whose position is back of the line of scrimmage, ruled on the play, whereas Field Judge Rockwell Kemp, who was within 6 yards of the two players, did not call interference. Coach Shaughnessy claims he saw interference. I admit I didn't see the play at all because of enveloping darkness. But the movies show there was no interference—and that the game was taken away from the Bears.

"The Rams used an illegal tackle eligible play, which we protested at the time. The movies show Elroy Hirsch 5 feet off the scrimmage line. On this play Bob Waterfield passed to Left Tackle Huffman, the play going 24 yards to our 10-yard line. The Rams scored several plays later.

"When Bill DeCorrevont intercepted one of Waterfield's passes in the first quarter, Field Judge Kemp called interference on George McAfee, who actually blocked End Bob Shaw before the pass was thrown.

"Kemp admitted his error to Ray Bray immediately after . . . and we have nothing for admiration of an official of that type . . . even though the subsequent play resulted in a field goal for the Rams.

"As for the matter of refusing to turn on the lights until the Rams had gained possession of the ball, we feel that 86,000 or more fans were entitled to see the last seven minutes of the game. Commissioner Bell already has taken steps to see that such a thing never happens again."

"Shaughnessy efred if he was quoted correctly when he stated that 'crews of officials all over the country are assigned by Commissioner Bell's assistant, Shorty Ray.' That is not the case. At no time since he has been associated with the National Football League has Shorty Ray selected officials or appointed any crews to the games."

Other leaders in their divisions are: 90-pounds — Bob Bennett (Merrick), 21 points; 105-pounds—Skippy Crampton (Georgetown), 24 points; Junior Varsity Class—Don Curry (Merrick), 24 points; varsity class—Duffy Hutton (Eastern Branch), 12 points.

Duke's Earon Lineman of Week; 2 Terps Named

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—A Northern lad who went South to play football is this week's lineman of the week.

Blaine Earon, Duke's sophomore end from Altoona, Pa., won top honors in the weekly Associated Press voting. His spectacular defensive play helped Duke come from behind in the second half to beat Georgia Tech, 27-14.

This week's nominations:

Tackles—Dick Clark, Cornell; Wade Walker, Oklahoma; Ray Krouse, Maryland; Dale Dodrill, Colorado A. & M.; Leon Manley, Oklahoma.

Howard Harriers Defeat Lincoln

Against Spartans

It's an Old Story—Irish Picked Again

By Paul D. Williamson

The national football feature this week is a question of an old name and an old story. The old name is Notre Dame, playing Michigan State Saturday. The old story is victory for Notre Dame, perhaps by two or more touchdowns.

The No. 2 game of the week, in Waco, Tex., will be Baylor's surprising Bears versus strong University of Texas. It looks like a win for Baylor.

In the Big 10 scramble, Illinois should beat Indiana, Minnesota should came back and take Iowa, and Wisconsin looks like the winner in its game with Northwestern. As a surprise pick of the week, the System offers Pittsburgh U over Ohio State. That's what the very close figures say.

Pensylvania ought to get by Virginia, although there may be an upset lurking here. Virginia's Cavaliers are one of the undefeated and untied teams of the Nation.

The general bill of fare on Friday will include: Villanova over Georgetown U (by about two touchdowns); Hardin - Simmons over Loyola in Los Angeles, and Miami, Fla., over Detroit U.

In the Southeast it looks like Tennessee over Georgia Tech. Tulane ought to stop Navy, with emphasis on the "ought."

C&P Gives Case for D. C. Rate Boost

Phone Firm Cites Higher Labor Costs And Building Need, Says Earnings Drop

A three-point case for a $3,249,000 increase in local rates was presented to the District Public Utilities Commission by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday.

The firm contended the rate boost, which would amount to about 13 per cent for subscribers, was necessary to offset:

1. Increased labor expenses.
2. Additional construction needs at "prevailing high price levels."
3. A record of continually declining earnings, "insufficient to permit the attraction . . . of sufficient equity capital to hold the debt ratio down to prewar levels."

Returns Are Cited

At an all-day hearing in the District Building board room, I. Gordon Rector, assistant comptroller of the C. & P., testified that earnings resulted in a return of 4.28 percent on average net original cost investment for nine months of 1949, 3.96 percent for the last six months and "only 3.5 percent for the last three months."

Donald R. Belcher, treasurer of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which owns the local C. & P. firm completely, explained that his firm sells its own securities in advance of the needs of operating companies, such as C. & P., and then funds drawn from the A. T. & T. reservoir are repaid

The witness then declared that the credit of the A. T. & T. Bell System depends on the combined earnings of the member companies, including C. & P. He said the system's credit has declined because of low earnings and thus the cost of new security issues has increased.

Company officials testified that labor expenses have risen from 44.1 percent of total operating revenues to 57.6 percent from 1935 to the present.

Plant Investment Up

C. H. Johnson, vice president and general manager, said that during the postwar years plant investment has increased 33 million dollars as the result of a record construction program to meet heavy demands for service. Many more millions will be needed to provide plant capacity and service improvements "within the next few years."

John J. Kirby, attorney for the Bureau of Federal Supply, General Services Administration, was present at the hearing. The Federal Government, largest C. & P. customer here, was permitted by PUC to intervene in the case.

After completing company testimony, the commission adjourned the hearing to 10 a. m. November 29 to permit time for study of the firm's 16 statistical exhibits and preparation for crossexamination of the company witnesses.

Ol' No. 1550 Nonchalantly Makes First Run In Newly-Opened Tube Under Dupont Circle

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON SUBWAY—"Step to the rear of the car, please," says the motorman as passengers board the trolley in the underground terminal in Dupont Circle's northbound tunnel, opened yesterday for the first time. This is one of first cars

Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer went to Germany May 12 to ride into Berlin on the first train to enter the German capital after the 14½-month Russian blockade. When Capital Transit scheduled the first streetcar under Dupont Circle it was appropriate that The Washington Post's transportation opener-upper should be aboard. Here is her firsthand account.

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer
Post Reporter

At 4:44 a. m. Capital Transit Car No. 1550, routed for the regular No. 42 run, pulled out of Lincoln Park car barn at 14th and E. Capitol sts. ne. Howard Norford, with the company 33 years, was at the controls.

There were no photographers, no crowds, to send off No. 1550 on its momentous trip. The radio was silent. Norford, in an impeccable new uniform, drove serenely, hitting a smart 25 to 30-mile clip on the stretch. No. 1550 beelined to Union Station, then doubled back to 13th and D sts. ne., where Conductor Norford, timepiece at hand, waited from 4:58 to 5:02 a. m. Thirteen passengers, all masculine, got on.

They were postoffice employes, hotel workers, all but one of sober mien. The sole bright light was a carefree character garbed in blue jeans, chinchilla overcoat and visored hat. "I'm goan to Richmond today," he gurgled to an unresponsive audience, "an' I doan like getting up this early one little bit!"

No. 1550 rocked along C st. between rows of parked cars, its headlight sparking the ruby glow of the taillight after taillight. The only other mobile traffic was a green truck labeled "Perfection Pies."

At C and 9th, a passenger offloaded and four, including a woman, stepped on. The next stop two more women and a postal employe, carrying a paper shopping bag, were picked up. No. 1550 looped into Massachusetts ave. and back to the bleak Union Station, where a man with a suitcase got on.

The Richmond-bound gent forgot to disembark at the station. He wobbled off at the Main Postoffice. From G st. No. 1550 somehow managed to get onto F st. nw.

Though it was still dark, most of the passengers greeted Norford with an optimistic "Good morning." At F and 11th, two handsome lady passengers, their bobby-pinned hairdos concealed by silk scarves, left to make bus connections to the Pentagon.

No. 1550 hit New York ave. at 5:20 a. m. on the nose, twisting down H into 17th and then up Connecticut. All but four of the passengers left at the Mayflower stop.

Reporter Gets Down to Work

Trade began to pick up the stop before Dupont Circle. Some 20 assorted persons, officials, a few of the curious, a reporter from a rival gazette, stepped aboard. The reporter, a blonde mustachioed man, whipped out a notebook. He got to work with commendable promptness by taking down the names of nonofficial riders.

Only interesting type was a briefly bearded man in a green windbreaker. His name was Merrill, he was born in 1905, he had been, so he said, totally disabled in the war, and was trying to get a GI study course in photography.

"His pension had been upped to $150 a month. He had been born right near Dupont Circle.

As he had never been "first" anywhere, he thought it worth while to invest 13 cents in this particular ride. "If I had that course, I might be out there on assignment with those photographers, now." Sure enough, there were the inevitable cameramen clicking away while No. 1550 obligingly hesitated, on unballasted track, before plunging into the yawning gray cement ahead.

"I've Been Waiting Years'

Officials fussed, a handful of workmen hovered, a man with a brown crash helmet initialed "D. C." in white letters heaved aboard with a man wearing a hearing appliance." "I've been waiting years to see this,' he exclaimed.

Slowly, and with considerable majesty, No. 1550 slid down toward the cavity, ground to a stop for posterior photographs, inched toward a second battery of lensmen fancily equipped with tripods. "Watch the birdie!" "Smile!" the gay passengers admonished Norford, who unbent the tiniest fraction. Then with a triumph ding-dang-ding-DANG he gave No. 1550 the gas and we whizzed along, the underground platform glittering with pearly tiles bordered in sapphire blue, station names lettered with handsome legibility in silver.

Without hesitation, No. 1550 shot up the incline, stopped gracefully at S st. where, amidst construction confusion, most of the passengers exited into the chillsome dawn. The streetcar tube of Dupont Circle project was officially opened.

Park View Backed for Overflow Of Cardozo

Dr. Corning Wants Central High for A Postgraduate White Program

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning recommended yesterday that Park View Elementary School and not the white Central High School be used to relieve overcrowding at the Negro Cardozo High School.

The school head revealed he has other plans for Central. They call for establishment there of a postgraduate technical program for white students similar to that provided for Negro youths at Armstrong.

Corning presented a 20-page analysis of the Cardozo situation to the Board of Education at a meeting attended by more than 200 persons. About half were students from Central who have appealed to school officials to let them remain in their building.

The board received Corning's report for study and indicated that interested citizens will be given a chance to speak on the proposal before it is voted on November 16.

Effective Next September

Dr. Corning said the "strictly temporary" use of Park View as an annex to Cardozo could be put into effect by September, 1950. The building would revert to elementary students on completion of Spingarn High in 1951.

Transfer of Cardozo students to Central was described by the superintendent as "not educationally sound," and he said it would precipitate a "major educational tragedy." He also rejected proposals that Cardozo be afforded relief by transfer of the white Wilson Teachers College or the white Roosevelt High School.

Transfer of any of the schools would disrupt the long-range building program which calls for construction of three new Negro high schools, he declared. With Central, Negro schools would have space for 1396 students above present enrollment of 4730, he said.

The addition of Spingarn, even with abandonment of Cardoza, would leave a surplus capacity of 1956. The present Armstrong also could be closed, still leaving a surplus of 879 seats, Dr. Corning said.

Patently Temporary

"No arguments from the standpoint of capacity would remain for the construction of new Armstrong and Cardozo high schools," he asserted.

On the other hand, he said, the Park View "arrangement is so patently temporary that the superintendent, the Board of Education and the colored population will be free to press for early construction of a new Cardozo High School."

The superintendent said Central still is needed as a white school. He introduced a map indicating a heavy concentration of white high school population in the area of Central.

He described as "educationally unsound" the displacement of 1335 students now attending Central to provide relief for a surplus enrollment of 756 students at Cardozo. He added the 28-room Park View building has sufficient space for the 468 elementary students now enrolled there and for 500 girl high school students from Cardozo.

The building has an auditorium, two gymnasiums, a large home economics laboratory and a library, and is adjacent to a large recreational area, Corning said.

The Park View, formerly used by white students served as a school for veterans up to two years ago. It was transferred to the Negro division last June.

Corning said 28 students in special braille, sight conservation and hard-of-hearing classes would be transferred from the building to the Morse School, 5th and R sts. nw., to provide space for the high school students.

Bar Indorses 9 for 3 City Judgeships

Adams, Diamond, Goldstein Among Those Recommended

The District Bar Association yesterday recommended nine Washington area lawyers for the three vacancies on the Municipal Court bench here.

Albert F. Adams, John B. Diamond 3d, Alfred Goldstein, William R. Lichtenberg, Matthias Mahorner, John J. Malloy, Joseph A. Roney, Thomas C. Scalley and Richard Tedrow.

Godfrey L. Munter and Walter M. Bastian, of the association's committee on judicial selections, and Jerome Barnard, the association president, presented the names to Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

Munter told reporters that McGrath made no commitments, but promised to give the candidates careful consideration before he made his own recommendations to President Truman.

Munter said the nine were chosen from 156 names suggested to the committee in more than 750 letters. He said that the choices were not made on the number of favorable letters each received.

Girl Amnesia Victim Seeks Aid of Police

Police and Gallinger Hospital doctors last night were seeking to learn the identity of an attractive 18-year-old girl patient who said she could not remember who she was.

The girl walked into Police Headquarters about 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, told officers she had been walking in the rain for three hours, and "I don't know who I am, or where I am going."

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Police Women's Bureau, said the girl was "most intelligent." She was well dressed and carefully groomed.

Girl, 7, Found Near Lanham

Elementary School for her first school day in Maryland.

Claire formerly attended Kingsman School, 14th and E sts. ne.

The principal, Miss Lavonne Patterson, explained that the school was overcrowded, Mrs. Hanratty said, and suggested Claire be taken to the Lanham Primary School, nearly a mile from her home.

The mother and child, accompanied by Mrs. Cora Pyles, wife of a janitor at the elementary school, went to the primary school with a note for Mrs. Warren requesting her to put Claire on the Seabrook school bus when the day's session was over.

Hanratty, an employe of the Ransdell Printing Co., 810 Rhode Island ave. ne., was unaware his daughter was missing when he arrived in Seabrook from work at about 7:30 p. m.

He noticed a crowd gathered around the firehouse and was told "a little girl" was missing." Further inquiries brought out that it was his own daughter.

Martin Barr of Lanham, driver of the school bus, declared he did not recall seeing a girl answering Claire's description and said he believed he would have taken cognizance of any new child.

Arthur Kahn, director of the Prince Georges County Boys Club at West Lanham, reported another girl told him she had seen a girl she believed was Claire get off the bus at West Lanham about three-quarters of a mile from her home.

Virtually the entire community turned out for the search last night. Headquarters were set up in the elementary school building.

Participating were 100 soldiers from Fort Meade, details of policemen from Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties and six State policemen. In addition, 14 fire companies were represented, together with Boy Scouts, members of various boys clubs and other residents.

3 Men Burned As Fumes Cause Truck Explosion

Three men suffered first and second degree burns yesterday in a truck explosion at Lorton, Va., caused when fumes ignited.

Reported in satisfactory condition at Alexandria Hospital are Frank Cheatham, 29, Route 2, Alexandria, driver of the truck; Hoyt Trucka, 29, Lorton, a carpenter's helper; and James L. Brown, 39, 1913 13th st. nw., helper.

Cheatham told hospital attendants the explosion occurred when he lit a cigarette while standing some 5 feet behind the truck. He said he noticed a strong odor of lacquer or varnish when the truck doors were opened.

The truck contained insulation blocks destined for a housing project at Lorton. Brown was in the rear of the truck and Trucka was nearby at the time of the explosion. The men were burned about their faces and hands.

Jury Picked In Gambling Trial of 14

9 Men, Three Women To Hear Case Against 'Snags' Lewis, 13 Others

A jury of nine men and three women was impaneled in District Court yesterday in the case of the United States vs. William (Snags) Lewis and 13 others, accused of conducting a multimillion-dollar gambling operation.

The trial started in a crowded courtroom before Judge Matthew F. McGuire, more than seven months after the group was arrested with 16 others in a series of mass raids by United States marshals.

Prosecutor William Hitz questioned prospective jurors on any connection they might have with a list of more than 60 known gamblers, attorneys, business firms and future witnesses.

Two Farms on List

On the list Hitz read to the jurors were the names of the men indicted by the special District gambling grand jury, two liquor stores, two poultry farms, three used car companies, and three employes of the Washington Times-Herald—H. A. Robinson, circulationtion director, Herman Cohen, circulation supervisor, and Sidney Epstein, a reporter.

Hitz said that jurors with any "significant connection" with persons or firms on his list should disqualify themselves.

Charles E. Ford, attorney with Myron G. Ehrlich for all the defendants but Lewis, countered Hitz's list with one of his own. He asked the jurors if they were associated in any way with three executives and one reporter of The Washington Post.

Ford listed Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, Philip L. Graham, publisher; Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher, and Benjamin Bradlee, reporter.

William H. Collins, attorney with Bernard Margolius for Lewis, asked the prospective jurors if they had any connection with any Government investigators.

Judge McGuire excused one juror. Three were challenged by the Government, and five were challenged by the defense.

Case Adjourned Today

As soon as the jury was picked, Judge McGuire adjourned the case until 10:30 a. m. today.

All the defendants are charged with violating the District statute which prohibits operating a numbers lottery, and conspiring to violate that statute.

In addition to Lewis, whom United States Attorney George Morris Fay has described as a "big-shot gambler," the defendants are John R. Mitchell, 3110 10th st. ne.; Fulton J. Mitchell, 517 10th st. ne., George P. Scott, 1031 E st. se.; Fred Sutton, 1210 6th st. nw.; Lonnie Black, 637 L st. se.; Anis Wycke, 122 F st. nw.; Ralph Spotswood, 318 N. Henry st., Alexandria, Va.; Edward L. Hinkle, jr., 811 Presidential Gardens, Alexandria; Gregory Seger, 2801 22d st. se.; Sterling D. Welch, 4611 Verplank pl. nw.; Dean Kennedy, 2100 Queens Chapel rd., Avondale, Md.; Bernard J. DelNegro, 2428 Tunlaw rd. nw., and Ellis Solet, 2805 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va.

All were arrested on March 25 at Lewis' headquarters, 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md. All pleaded innocent on April 14.

Most of District Guard Will Camp At Fort Miles

All but two units of the District National Guard ground force will hold their 1950 encampment July 9-23 at Fort Miles, Del., it was announced yesterday.

The date and site were chosen during a two-day meeting between Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, Guard commander, and representatives of the Second Army at Fort Meade. All units of the District Guard will participate in a formal review in the Armory at 8:30 p.m. today in honor of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, former Guard commander who retires officially today.

State to Aid In Solving Ditch Problem

Elimination of stagnant-water ditches along Franklin ave., in Silver Spring is in sight, following a conference yesterday between Montgomery County and State officials.

Three cases of polio have been reported in the area, one fatal.

County Manager Irving G. McNayr said yesterday, following an on-the-scene conference with State Road Commission District Engineer Edward G. Duncan, that the State Roads Commission will lay drainage pipes supplied by the county and will grade the surrounding area to eliminate standing waters, following an engineering survey to be begun immediately.

Polio Toll for Year Reaches 38,153 Cases

The 1949 polio toll for the Nation reached 38,153 cases reported with the inclusion of last week's declining toll of 1071 new cases, it was reported yesterday.

Although last week's total was greater than the 830 cases recorded in the corresponding week of last year, it was still 77 cases fewer than for the week ending October 22, Public Health Service statisticians said.

It thus marked the tenth straight week of decline in new polio cases since the national peak, reached on August 20, they said. Of the Nation's total for the week, Maryland reported 24 new cases, the District recorded 7, and Virginia 9.

Mrs. Mary Somary, who died here October 12 at the age of 49, left an estate of $178,000, probate papers disclosed yesterday in District Court. The estate goes to her husband, Felix Somary, internationally known financier residing at the Shoreham Hotel. There are two sons, Felix Henry Wolfgang Somary and Felix Jacques Johannes Somary, also residing at the Shoreham.

Slain Woman's Husband Tries To Drown Self

James W. Hawkins' wife died by their son's hand last year.

Yesterday Hawkins methodically bundled his coat, hat and identification papers together, weighted them with rock, and threw them into the Potomac. Then the 46-year-old bricklayer jumped into the river himself.

He was quickly rescued by three workmen. Police took him to Gallinger Hospital for observation. He was visited there later by his daughter-in-law, Myrene Hawkins. She is the young woman around whose shoulder he had placed his arm in comforting affection as James W. Hawkins, jr.—her husband, his son—faced the coroner's jury.

Son Now in Jail

James, jr., was convicted by a District Court jury of manslaughter in the knife slaying of his mother, Mrs. Evelyn E. Hawkins, 44, in July, 1948. After trial last December, he was sentenced in January to 3 to 15 years for the crime.

The slaying followed a family drinking party in their home in the 600 block of Sheridan st. nw. during which the boy and his mother struck up a violent argument. He stabbed her with a butcher knife, claiming later his mother had come at him with the knife in a drunken rage.

Sorry He Did It

Yesterday the elder Hawkins, who has been rooming for the past two weeks at 703 Randolph st. nw., went to the American Oil Co. dock at the Virginia end of Key Bridge. After jumping into the river, he was pulled out by three District Highway department employes: Oliver Hart, of Glen Echo Heights, Md., Woodrow Robinson, 816 N st. nw; and Preston Willis, 120 Virginia ave. sw.

He was taken to the Seventh Precinct station by officers A. R. Matlock and R. E. Cox, and from there went to the hospital.

$6 Pay Raise Averts Strike At Safeway

Union warehouse employes of Safeway Stores last night approved a company offer of a $6-a-week raise and improved overtime and vacation benefits, a union representative announced.

Union approval of the offer ended nine weeks of negotiations and averted a strike scheduled to begin this morning, reported Frank W. Gibson, business agent of Local 730, Warehouse Employes Union of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (AFL).

The new contract covers approximately 500 Safeway employes. It provides for a blanket $6 weekly raise. The employes covered are now making from $42 to $59 per week. The new contract, Gibson said, also contains an improved vacation clause, sets up double-time payment for Sunday work, and sets up a grievance committee.

The union had originally asked a $10 raise, and had rejected the $6 offer in a vote last Saturday. At that time, it was decided to go out on strike if no agreement was reach by tonight.

2 Bus Service Extension Bids Denied by PUC

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday denied two requests for extension of Capital Transit Co. bus service.

The PUC denied a request by CTC that it be permitted to extend a route from the intersection of Eastern and Georgia aves. to Grubb rd. at the District line. Residents in the area had opposed the change, and the PUC stated it felt testimony did not justify it.

The other denial was on a request of the Shepard Park Citizens Association asking extension and improvement of 16th st. and Eastern ave. bus service. The PUC felt the changes asked would not be in the public interest.

Armenian Food Sale

Armenian and American foods will be sold at a bazaar sponsored by the Armenian Church Purchasing Fund Committee from 5 to 10 p. m. Friday and Saturday and from 2 to 10 p. m. Sunday at Ascension and St. Agnes Episcopal Church Hall, 12th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Negro School Finished, 522 Go on Fulltime

Occupancy of the new Scott-Montgomery Elementary School, 5th and P sts. nw., has provided full-time schooling for 522 Negro students formerly on part-time programs.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning yesterday reported to the Board of Education that 14 classes at the Cook, Langston and Morse Schools were placed on full time by completion of the building. Waiting lists of students to enter kindergarten also were abolished at the schools, he said.

In white elementary classes there are 2123 children on the half day schedules, Corning reported.

The school board at its regular semi-monthly meeting promoted six teachers to principals or assistant principals and retired two teachers. Appointed were:

Mrs. Eudor H. J. Winters, teacher at the Monroe Laboratory School, to principal of Phillips and Wormley Elementary Schools.

Mrs. Ruth S. Woodson, teacher at Crummell School, to temporary principal of Pierce, Taylor and Hayes Schools.

Mrs. Thelma J. Bryant, principal of Pierce, Taylor and Hayes Schools, was transferred to principal of Burrville School.

Howard F. Bolden, teacher of music at Cardozo, to assistant principal of Miller Junior High School.

Purvis J. Williams, teacher of biology at Dunbar, to temporary assistant principal of Dunbar High School.

Mrs. Gladys O. Horn, counselor at Anacostia High School, to temporary assistant principal.

Mrs. Evangeline P. Queen, research assistant in the department of educational research, to assistant principal of Browne Junior High School.

Retired were:

Mrs. Nannie A. Aitcheson, teacher at Eastern Elementary School.

Mrs. Nona Fern Breidenbach, teacher of mathematics and geography at Paul Junior High School.

2 Bureaus Asked To Aid Blast Probe

Investigators yesterday asked the Bureau of Mines and the Bureau of Standards to aid in determining the cause of the explosions that blasted the seventh and eighth floors of the new Post Office Department building Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a four-man inquiry board, appointed by Charles A. Peters, deputy commissioner for building management, of the General Services Administration, began interviewing employes who might throw light on the blasts and fire.

Peters said the probers were working on the theory that a fire, caused by a short circuit, started in the electric panels in the eighth floor corridor walls.

The panel boards control switches transmitting low-tension current to various parts of the building for lights, electric machines and the elevator, Peters explained.

He said it is believed there were three blasts in all, which buckled walls and caused ceilings to collapse on the north side of the seventh and eighth floors and in about two rooms on the sixth.

Most of the damaged offices were those of the Federal Communications Commission. Officials said the amount of damage to records could not immediately be determined.

Work returned to near-normal in other parts of the building. Officials said the "best guess" was that damage would run between $100,000 and $150,000.

All 14 civilians and firemen injured had been released from hospitals by last night.

Members of the board of inquiry are J. W. Dunham, assistant chief of the Public Buildings Administration structural division; L. M. Endres, chief electrical engineer in the PBA building management division; Nathan G. Baker, chief of PBA safety and fire prevention, and F. J. Muller, PBA electrical engineer.

Couple Held In Theft of U. S. Checks

A 36-year-old woman and her 44-year-old male companion were arraigned here yesterday on forgery charges arising from theft of government checks whose total, police estimated, may be close to $5000.

The woman, Lilly Mae Stewart, out of prison since January by grace of a conditional release from a sentence for forgery slated to run through December 12, was charged with forging and uttering, stealing from the mails, and forging an application for a Postal Savings account. Bond for her was fixed at $5000.

The man was Robert O. Woodhouse, charged with forging and uttering, with bond set at $500.

Their arrest Tuesday in a ground floor apartment at 23 K st. ne. followed a month's long investigation in which Secret Service agents, Postal inspectors and detectives of the check and fraud squad in the Metropolitan Police Department teamed up.

The break came Tuesday when Woodhouse was spoted in a department store by a store detective who knew him, according to J. A. Verant, a postal inspector.

The store detective, Mike Roberts, saw Woodhouse cash a check. Roberts went to the cashier's cage and found it to be a Government check. Secret Service agents contacted the veteran to whom the $120 check had been made out.

Next step was the discovery and arrest of the man and woman at the K st. apartment.

760 Chaplains on Duty Meet Most Army Needs, Chief Says

The need for chaplains for active duty with the Army is not great now, Maj. Gen. Roy Hartford Parker, Army Chief of Chaplains, reported yesterday.

At the present time there are 760 chaplains on active duty with the Army, he told members of the General Commission on Chaplains at a meeting yesterday at General Commission headquarters, 122 Maryland ave. ne. The commission acts as a coordinating body for Protestant denominations in their work with the armed services and the Veterans Administration.

Chaplain Parker said that of the total number of chaplains on active service, 453 are serving in the United States and 307 overseas. During the next fiscal year, he said, the Army probably will need no more than 50 additional chaplains.

Chaplain Rear Admiral Stanton W. Salisbury, Navy Chief of Chaplains, told the group of about 50 denominational representatives that the Navy is allowed to have 455 chaplains, and now has 444. He said there are vacancies for about 150 chaplains in the Naval Reserve, although the need is largely for young men of the grade of lieutenant, junior grade.

A report on the chaplaincy of the Air Force was made by Chaplain Pierce, who said that although the chaplains favored a program they are conducting with men in the Air Force, they still have a job to do in "selling" commanding officers on the program. The Air Force has a total of 474 chaplains.

Veterans Administration chaplains must carry on a "patient-centered ministry" Chaplain Donald Beatty of the VA stresses in his report.

Standardized Building Code Recommended

A comprehensive, standardized building code to replace complicated and outmoded codes in many jurisdictions was adopted by the Building Officials Conference of America, Inc., yesterday.

The fruit of four years of spadework by officials and industry engineers, the new code was hailed as one of the first attempts "to open the door for modern developments in materials and construction methods."

Adopted at the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the conference in the Wardman Park Hotel, the code will be offered and recommended to local jurisdictions that control building standards over the Nation.

According to George E. Strehan, New York City consultant who helped draft the new code, its major concept is to replace complex and detailed specifications on materials and methods with a set of "performance standards."

In other words, he said, new developments in the building industry not covered by old codes would be permissible under the new code if they functioned within the specified safety and performance standards.

At a banquet last night, Dr. Edward U. Condon, director of the National Bureau of Standards, described his bureau's work in research and testing in the field of building technology.

The conference yesterday re-elected Albert H. Baum, Building Commissioner of St. Louis, as president; Joseph P. Wolff, Building Commissioner of Detroit, first vice president; Arthur J. Benline, superintendent of the Department of Housings and Buildings, New York City, second vice president; and Arthur N. Rutherford, Building Inspector of West Hartford, Conn., treasurer.

Bert J. Westover, director of the Administrative Building Council of Indianapolis, was elected secretary.

In a closing session today, Raymond M. Foley, Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, will speak on "Housing."

President Truman met Mrs. Truman on her return from St. Louis yesterday, but had to abandon his morning walk to do so.

Thinking the train was late, the President started the 17-block stroll from Blair House to Washington's Union Station.

He hopped into a car and picked up the president a quarter of a mile away and the Chief Executive made the rest of the trip in a black limousine.

Secretary to Senator Wins Women's Bond Drive

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

A CONGRESSIONAL SECRETARY—Mrs. Luna Diamond—last night was named the best woman bond seller in the Savings Bond Opportunity Drive sponsored by the Women's Section, D. C. Savings Bonds Division. Along with this accolade went the grand prize, a week's vacation in Bermuda.

Mrs. Diamond was one of 25 women prize winners announced at a gala show and award ceremony at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Diamond, secretary to Senator Clinton P. Anderson, is bond chairman of the Order of the Eastern Star. During the opportunity drive she was credited with selling $617,275 in Series E bonds.

The Women's Section, of which Mrs. Lindsay P. Rawley is chairman, set a million-dollar quota for the drive. But volunteers topped the quotas by three million dollars.

Special tribute was paid to Mrs. Rawley's leadership and work by the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John S. Graham. He said that in the District of Columbia individual-owned Savings Bonds have a redemption value of almost 500 million dollars. This was made possible through the help of women volunteers.

"Americans today hold more Savings Bonds than at any time during the war. Nearly all these sales were made by volunteers or with their cooperation," Mr. Graham explained.

Thomas J. Groom, chairman, D. C. Savings Bonds Division, praised the women volunteers for their work in the drive.

Mrs. Caroline Wentworth, bond chairman for the D. C. Business and Professional Women's Club, received second prize in the contest. Her sales totaled $544,275.

Third prize went to Miss Altha Coons of the DAR. Mrs. Milton Bladinger, bond chairman for B'nai B'rith Women Argo, received fourth prize.

Other prize winners, most of whom were present, included Mrs. H. C. Hallam, jr., Mrs. Elizabeth N. Newburgh, Mrs. Albert E. Carter, Mrs. A. J. Kaplowitz, Mrs. Julius Kirson, Mrs. Eileen C. Nolad, Mrs. Grace Conway, Mrs. Sarah Deery, Mrs. Mary Sullivan, Mrs. Dorotha Dodge, Mrs. Freda Gordon, Mrs. Edward Davis, Mrs. Elizabeth Werner, Mrs. Nellie Tomlin, Mrs. Audrey Maxey, Mrs. Lorette Hupman, Mrs. Toula Evrepias, Mrs. Thomas J. Groom, Mrs. Norman T. Anderson, Mrs. Joseph T. Kelly, jr., and Miss Mary McCabe.

Entertainment at the award ceremony included a program by the National Press Club chorus of 40 voices under the direction of Dr. Clyde M. Huber; solos by Dolores DiMinni Breeskin; musical numbers by The Keys, a local barber shop quartet; Hawaiian dances by Miss Beverly Farrington, daughter of the Hawaiian Delegate and Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, and guitar music by Bob Knight. Rick LaFalce produced the stage show.

Growth of Washington Traced

THE PARALLEL GROWTH of Washington and the United Nations were discussed by Arthur Sweetser at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Soroptimist Club at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

Mr. Sweetser, director of the United Nations Information Office in Washington, holds the unique distinction of having served throughout the entire 27 years of both the League of Nations and the United Nations.

His talk traced the growth of Washington from the First World War period, when the Secretary of State, War and Navy were all housed on one floor, to the "most powerful and energetic capital in the world."

Mr. Sweetser said that the average citizen of the world doesn't have "the slightest conception" of what the United Nations is doing. He compared the political alliance to marriage: "If it's happy, you don't talk about it." He mentioned as U. N. achievements its "watching" of the Greek border in the interest of peace, and its aiding, in solution of the Palestine problem. He also said that U. N. sentinel duty at Kashmir has "prevented the most horrible religious and communal war possible."

Mme. E. N. van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, was a guest at the luncheon meeting as was Miss Eva Kulka, a fellow of the Southwest region of the Soroptimist.

"Women Never Know"

Balmain Answers His Own Fashion Quiz, Plugs the Straight Silhouette for '49

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HERE are the answers to yesterday's quiz on feminine fashions, given by Parisian designer Pierre Balmain:

1. Which silhouette is most generally accepted as "the shape" for 1949?

The straight, narrow silhouette is indicative of fashion for 1949. Interest will be concentrated on the sleeve and the shoulder.

2. What is the biggest news about this winter's furs?

The color renaissance is the big news in furs this year. Particularly Hollander's Midnight Blue Russian Broadtail and Persian Lamb, which are noteworthy and newsworthy.

3. Is costume jewelry still terribly important?

Yes. Costume Jewelry is tremendously good. The choker is important and real jewels combined with costume pieces look exciting.

4. Do hats grow tall or flat? Sit back or forward?

Hats grow flat and forward—a la Chinese modern.

5. Which are the favored fabrics of the current season?

For the daylight hours, blanket wools and stiff silk ottomans; by night, satin brocades

6. Which country influenced the Balmain collection this last season?

The Far East is a big influence in my current collection. The Chinese silhouette fascinates me!

7. Do you think the 1920 flapper is really going to change—in the words of South Pacific—"the frame of the dame"?

No—never!! Not as long as men have anything to do with designing for women or applauding the results. "The frame of any dame" can be enhanced by a bosom, a waistline and a curve of her own.

8. With hemlines going up—how high is up?

Fourteen inches is the highest I will let skirts go and I think American women will thank me for it.

9. What's the most sought-after look in the newest blouses

Low necklines, with high collars for elegant wear—again the Chinese modern, or simple mandarin look for suits.

10. Do you prefer the seductive "wrapped look" or the much more casual free-swinging silhouette?

Women never know what they want. One half of my customers want to be wrapped . . . the others prefer that free and easy approach to fashion.

Mary Haworth's Mail

When Visiting Her Kin Last Summer, Wife Could Hardly Wait to Get Back to Husband, But Since Then Her Love Has Cooled; Why?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last July I went home for a week and could hardly wait until the week was up, so I could see my husband again. I am 23, he is 26, and we have always been very happy together and very much in love, and I know we still are; but I can't understand my feelings lately.

A few weeks ago he was called home by his father's illness, and because of my job I couldn't go; but while he was gone I wasn't lonely and didn't miss him, and I really felt guilty about it. It seemed such a relief not to have to worry about meals and other housewifely duties; and I was sorry when it was time for him to return.

After John had been home a week he felt the change, for he said I seemed unhappy and asked what was wrong. Of course I gave him utmost assurance that I am very happy and much in love with him; but something is wrong and I can't conceal it. I can't feel tender in his embrace any more, yet I want to love him as I always have, for he is kind and sympathetic and wonderful in every respect.

Would Childless Status Cause It?

I HAVE thought of discussing the problem with our pastor and his wife, but they are close personal friends and I'd rather not let them know about it; so please rush me some explanation, as I don't want our marriage to go on the rocks. We don't go out much at nights, other than to visit friends, as we can't afford it. We belong to church and don't drink; and I don't smoke. No children.

P. S.: This summer I didn't work and we wanted a baby so badly then, but we didn't feel we could afford it and I have taken another job and haven't been happy since. Would this have anything to do with how I feel toward my husband? B. R.

Wife Has Sensed Source of Vexation

DEAR B. R.: The closing paragraph of your letter, tacked on as a postscript, refers to the starting point of your unconscious quarrel with John, I think.

As I get the drift, you feel profoundly frustrated and fiercely irritated (unconsciously) because your love relations with John seem at a dead end, in the sense that the union is kept barren for "practical" reasons that reflect on John's provider capacities, while you remain harnessed to an economic rat-race of getting and spending dollars,—with the result that your development as a woman is "arrested" short of what nature intended, and short of what your personality craves as its due.

It seems apparent that despite loving John, you are beginning to feel, even though you haven't spelled out the thoughts in your mind—"What's the use of marriage anyway? . . . Why bother with a man?" etc., if you aren't to produce children under his protectorate and enjoy them in youthful years; and if his only goal or desire, insofar as you can see, is to be maintained in comfort (by your joint efforts) in a honeymoon arrangement for two.

Although you say, "We didn't feel we could afford a baby this year," which indicates that the decision is mutual, it is evident that unconsciously you blame John for this stagnant stage of affairs. But perhaps that is natural.

Try to Unite in Understanding

WHEN a healthy young woman—healthy in body, mind and emotions—warmly loves, respects and admires a man whose life is devotedly joined to hers, she wants instinctively to create a child or children in his image. And in this she differs from the average man, who tends to feel that her care and companionship are all-sufficient for him, even though he may kindly accept children or purposefully include them in his specifications for the good life—as sons, heirs, bearers of the name, etc.

Various times in years of reading I have come upon searching sensitive studies of women's "depths-psychology" reaction to a mate-love relationship centered on sexual intimacy which rules out child bearing. And the comment indicates that at the primal center of feeling her reaction to this thwarting is one of outrage, even though consciously, so far as she knows, she may consider the expedient policy wholly acceptable to her.

So, to sum up, I think you've whiffed the trouble. And my advice is to trust John's love as being real and strong enough to welcome a frank admission that something is wrong, when it is; and to help you through a thoughtful discussion of the possibility that "this is it,"—and what to do about it. Very often in matters of the kind, a heart-to-heart talk is all that's necessary to put things right. M.H.

Science Tackles the Unhappy Marriage

Sex Problems Chief Cause of Domestic Rifts

This is the fourth in a series of six articles on marriage problems.

By Gerald W. Johnson

IT IS A curious fact, according to Gladys Hoagland Groves, who speaks from lifelong experience, that the most appalling problems with which a marriage counselor must cope, seldom arise from the more frightful calamities that befall married people.

Really terrible trouble draws married couples together oftener than it drives them apart. A death in the family, a crippling accident, a fire that burns the house and everything in it, a business depression that wipes out the family savings—not often do things like these set husband and wife hating each other.

As a rule, they are sorry for each other and more, not less, thoughtful and kind.

The poisonous stuff that results in deep, strongly rooted hate comes from more ordinary happenings. As a rule, it has something to do with the element that ought to be the strength of a marriage, the relation of the sexes.

The modern world has made a worse mess of this than of almost any other problem with which it has to deal. And it is possible the English-speaking peoples have dealt with it less intelligently than any other.

Strong Curbs Required

THE SEXUAL URGE is one of the most powerful forces, therefore it requires very strong curbs. Every man and woman of sense knows this, and none better than the marriage counselor.

But what are the strongest curbs? Those that do the work. A piano wire will hold up a weight that will snap a thick, hemp cord so if you want to make something completely secure, it is better to bind it with piano wire than with cord, even though the cord looks stronger.

The marriage counselor's best instrument in dealing with sex problems is plain common sense but, unfortunately, to people who are not well informed common sense, like piano wire, looks weak.

More than that, it takes a great deal more than common sense to spot the trouble in many cases. The sex urge, denied its natural expression, is pretty sure to break out in some other form, frequently in a form that cannot be recognized except by a highly skilled observer.

When he does spot it, he is using common sense, but the patient doesn't always think so. The patient is likely to think, "Why, that's got nothing to do with sex; the man's crazy as a loon!"

The really crazy idea is not the marriage counselor's but the notion, held by millions, that this extremely difficult subject can be understood by anybody without any study at all.

The truth is the exact opposite—sex is just about the hardest subject in the world to understand. To attempt to regulate it without any knowledge of it is simply begging for trouble.

Prudish Attitude Met

MANY of us, especially in the older generation, to this day are afraid to study it. And that is one of the greatest difficulties in the way of marriage counselors.

"It isn't nice," say the older people. They refuse not only to open their mouths, but even their minds.

They are right, to be sure. It isn't nice in many of its aspects. But the atomic bomb isn't nice, either, yet if we don't learn how to control it, it's going to blow us up, some day. Because people don't know how to control it, sex is blowing up marriages every day, causing more sorrow, pain, anxiety and general unhappiness than war itself.

Yet scientists tell us that atomic energy, if it were thoroughly understood, turned in the right direction, and used to the limit, could make this earth something like Eden. Marriage counselors, scientists of a different kind, have the same idea about the power of sex.

Since this explosive force is already blowing us up, the idea has a strong appeal. Divorce is one of the smaller evils produced by married people's mistaken ideas about sex. Worse evils than divorce come of it; one can hardly pick up a paper without seeing how it has led to insanity, suicide, or murder.

Divorce Figures Misled

A REAL good marriage counselor, though, is not content merely to prevent evil; he doesn't consider his advice a success unless it produces happiness.

They are optimistic people, strong for looking on the bright side. They have seen too much to believe that all marital troubles relating to sex can be cured, but they know that a lot of them can even when they have produced very ugly results.

Divorce is expensive, troublesome, unpleasant. People will put up with a good deal before they go to court. So it seems probable that for every divorce there are several unhappy marriages. Since one sixth of all marriages end in divorce, it seems that the really happy ones are less than half of the total.

That sounds bad; yet in the face of it the marriage counselors assert that most married people could be happy if they once understood their troubles.

For once they understood, they could remove them, or at least not be very much bothered by them. And they could do it, not by any strange and difficult magic, but simply by using the brains God gave them.

Fish dish recipes are the star attraction of some very useful new book matches. Put out by the National Fisheries Institute, these matchbooks have colored pictures of our finny friends on the outside. As a service to homemakers, they will be given away at fish markets and other places selling seafood.

Big, thin lemon cookies are a recent addition to a well-known baked goods line here. They're packaged in coffee-type bags with a white and plaid cover that can be used for the youngster's school lunch later.

Hot barbecued chickens, fresh from a rotating electric spit, are being sold in a local grocery store these days. The wonderful aroma of roasting chicken greets you even before you step inside the place, lures you to a battery of individual glass-inclosed spits in the window of the store. The proprietor says it's a wonderful "come on" for customers and that he has more orders than he can fill. The chickens come to you wrapped in aluminum foil to keep them hot when you take them home.

Ask Anne About Making Fruit Cakes

I want to make some fruit cakes to sell. Please tell me how I can get information on how to measure at home for 1, 2, and 3-pound sizes and how much to charge. Does fruit weigh less cooked than raw? P. B. M.

Commercial bakeries allow one ounce per pound extra weight for weight loss in baking when putting the raw batter into the pan. Therefore, to have a fruit cake which weighs a pound when baked, they start out with 17 ounces of raw batter, for a two-pound cake they use 34 ounces, for a three-pound cake 51 ounces of raw batter.

Because the weight of your batter will vary with the recipe, the only sure way to determine the amount to put into each pan is to weigh it. This way all the cakes will be exactly the same size, also. To weigh them, use kitchen scales.

There are two ways to determine how much to charge. One way is to add together all the expenses including ingredients and fuel, plus 20 per cent or whatever profit you feel you should earn for your time, and divide it by the number of pounds of cake you made from that amount of ingredients. Another way is to charge as much for the cake as a commercially made cake of comparable quality would cost. In checking the cost of commercially made cakes I found them being sold for all the way from 40 cents to $1.40 a pound. The less expensive cakes contain little fruit and nuts, inexpensive shortening, and are less rich than the more expensive ones. If you are using as much as two and one-half pounds of fruit and nuts to five pounds of cake and are using other high grade ingredients, you should probably charge the top figure for your cakes.

Could you please tell me if there is any way I can clean a fiber (summer) rug? There are oil stains plus many other kinds of stains on it. A. G.

Since the rug is stained all over, the best way to refurbish it is to paint it. Before painting, dust clean with a broom or vacuum sweeper to remove loose dust, then place the rug on several thicknesses of newspaper and apply paint. Use a good grade floor paint which has been thinned with one part turpentine to four parts paint. Apply the paint with an old brush so you can work it well into the fibers of the rug. Allow the rug ample drying time before using.

My husband brought back from Egypt a leather hassock cover which we wish to stuff. Can you suggest an inexpensive method of stuffing it? The opening at the bottom of the cover is not large enough to use to cover over a bought hassock. Will it be necessary to make a frame for the inside of it? Or, will it be stout enough if stuffed with shredded paper, cotton, and such? M. M. C.

The best stuffing for the hassock would be excelsior, it seems to me. If stuffed tightly with this, a frame should not be necessary. There is a firm listed under "Excelsior" in the yellow pages of the telephone book which sells excelsior in any amount.

Will you please advise how a white ring, caused by water from a vase of flowers, can be removed from a veneer table? S. W.

Start by rubbing the ring with camphorated oil or scratch-concealing polish. To apply, moisten a cloth with the oil or polish and vigorously rub the spot, rubbing with the grain of the wood.

If the mark is deep and the above treatment does not completely remove it, try rubbing with a mild abrasive such as rottenstone and oil. Here again, rub with the grain of the wood and take care not to get the rottenstone in the area surrounding the stain. When the mark is removed, give the entire table top a good rubbing with wax or furniture polish.

If you keep a protective coating of wax on the table top, you will reduce the possibility of stains from moisture.

Next month I plan to give my 2-year-old daughter a birthday party. The guests will be 2, 3 or 4 years old. I plan to start around 3:30 p. m. and was thinking of serving cup cakes and ice cream. Could you suggest some games or some sort of entertainment? L. M.

Here's a party idea for very small girls which was printed in the September, 1949, issue of the Family Circle magazine. The plans for the party were written by Mrs. Frank Costello, Bayside, New York.

She starts out by saying that, to make the occasion festive, you may suggest on the invitation that each little girl come in a lady's hat. That idea would make the party a success because little girls love to wear Mommie's hat!

For place cards, Mrs. Costello made 20 big disks, 10 to be tied to the backs of chairs at tthe table and 10 matching disks to be drawn for. Since none of the children could read they made up a name for each, Mrs. Cow, Mrs. Flower, Mrs. Umbrella, Mrs. Bird—to name a few. A picture of each object was drawn or pasted onto each disk with the word. Every child could identify the picture and then find her place at the table unassisted.

For entertainment the hostess asked each child who had an appropriate phonograph record to bring it to be played while refreshments were served. Each enjoyed his own contribution and appreciated the ones brought by others.

After refreshments, the hostess gave each girl a grocery store carton into which she had previously cut several windows and a door. For favors she gave each child a box of crayons with which she transformed her store carton into a house with shutters, chimney and so forth.

Attention J. B. W. and H. C.: As a result of your request which was recently printed in this column, several of our readers have sent in names of stores which will sell hand-made articles for individuals.

M. K. writes that the Brooke Johns Country Born Store, located between Olney and Norbeck, Maryland, sells only hand-made articles. According to A. H. H., the Forestville Ladies' Exchange and Gift Shop will open November 1. They plan to sell crocheted articles, hand-painted linens and china, ceramics, aprons—all handmade—and will sell for individuals who make such articles. This shop is to be located at Fowler's Lane, Mariboro Pike, next to the Forestville Elementary School. The telephone number is Hillside 6460.

In Arlington, the Double Duty Shop, rear 2500 Columbia pike, has a hobby corner where they will sell all sorts of hand-made articles and invite Ask Anne readers who have them for sale to display them in their store. You can contact them by mail at the above address.

You Can Beat Middle Spread With Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain

THEY say a woman isn't really interesting until she's in her middle thirties. The only hitch is that once we near that interesting age, the middle spread threatens.

But recall, it isn't age that's back of the spread. Most frequently the thickening is due to lax, toneless muscles and careless posture. Of course, it can be stray pounds concentrated there too, for soft muscles are susceptible to fatty deposits.

A little regular exercise will fix everything by toning the muscles banding the midsection. The trick is to take them daily. Here are three conditioners, the first one to counteract gravity.

Exercises

Position: Take a straight chair without arms and place it sideways. The idea is to have the chair seat support your legs. Then get into position thus: Lie on back on floor with lower legs across the chair seat, so the bend of the knee comes at the edge of the chair, in which position the hips are on floor fairly close to chair.

Movement: Now ups-a-daisy—bring hips off floor, at the same time pulling up snugly with abdominal muscles and stretching arms back on floor overhead . . . this gives an added uplift. Do not arc small of back; bring hips only to a straight line and be sure to add a strong in-pull with the girdle muscles as hips are lifted. Continue five times, rest and repeat five times. Later work up to 15 counts.

Relax and stretch . . .

Now return legs to chair seat, and from the same position as given in the first exercise, bend alternate knees toward chest, again putting the emphasis on the up-and-in pull of the girdle muscles. This brings the small of the back down to the floor which helps to counteract swayback. Repeat this exercise 6 to 12 times, performing slowly.

New Star Shines In Palace Farce

By Richard L. Coe

"EVERYBODY DOES IT," at the Palace, is a comical, welcome farce with an excellent cast.

Most people probably will think of this as "the Paul Douglas comedy," which is one way of saying that when the middle-aged fellow appeared with Linda Darnell in "A Letter to Three Wives," a star was born.

For Douglas is certainly star material and one can only hope that his employer, Twentieth Century-Fox, will handle this new personality wisely. No type-casting, please.

He's a biggish lug, no longer in the Peter Lawford flush of youth nor in the Ezio Pinza maturity. He's nothing especially heroic to look at, just a guy. But he behaves naturally in the heart-of-gold-neath-a-gruff-exterior style. He's far more polished than an actor he tends to suggest, William Bendix. I happen to be related to someone like him, which probably is what anyone who watches him might say, and that is his strongest appeal. You feel you know him.

He's playing the role of a successful house-wrecker whose wife has a Park ave. family and ambitions to become a great soprano. His father-in-law warns him that at the slightest sign of her ambition's rebirth, he should slap her down. Paul hasn't the heart to do this, and when by chance an operatic siren, soprano, discovers he has the robust sort of voice that breaks glass, he decides to show his wife that singing's just up his own larynx.

Her reactions are not what he hopes but, needing the money, he progresses from the concert stage to opera wherein his debacle is tremendous. Everybody's doped him up so that the opera stage becomes a shambles aux freres Marx. Only then, seeing him in the ridiculous position she once had been in, does wifie come back to him.

This is from a short story by James M. Cain, once filmed as "Wife, Husband and Friend." The approach ranges from frisky sentiment to outright farce, and you'll find many laughs on the way.

Celeste's a Honey

Nor is Douglas the only skilled member of Director Edmund Goulding's cast. As his wife, Celeste Holm is sheer joy, something more than just the movie pretty. She gives as delicate a caricature of the pallid concert artist as you're likely to find, so shrewdly subtle, in fact, that I fear the erstwhile Ado Annie may be urged to follow the concert routes. She sings "I Passed by Your Window" in a sweetly artless way, spiked with the kicking beverage of hidden satire. Her moment on that platform is one of the most sophisticated spoofs screened in years, a direct underplaying of Douglas' rude operatic debut.

Then there's Linda Darnell, looking every inch like Linda Darnell and singing like a passionate angel. Linda makes an oh-so-gentle play for Paul but doesn't get to first base.

Furthering the fun is a bitter limning of the concert hall accompanist by John Hoyt, once John Hoysradt of the night clubs and Bronxville, New York's Sunday school rolls. John makes this a handsome, waspish figure who sneers at all singers. Charles Coburn has a warm, humorous role as the father-in-law which suits him well, and Lucille Watson's grande dame pretentions are gilt-edged.

While the script and direction might have been less whiz-bang, it's the cast which makes "Everybody Does It" a pleasurable movie.

BEFORE I FORGET IT: that operatic sequence so energetically loused-up (unpleasant that word may strike some, but it's a key gag in the movie), is not a scene from "Aida." It seems to have been written as a spoof for this picture by Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco, the Italian-born composer for some years a resident of this country.

THE THESPIAN Study Club tonight will hold the last of its tryouts for its January production of "The Royal Family." . . . The group holds its auditions in the Garnet-Patterson Junior High School . . . Miss Lillian E. Tanner, 1228 Fairmont st. nw., is president of the organization

Two in Family Died Insane, Burgman Says

Herbert John Burgman, former American Embassy clerk in Berlin, took the stand in his own defense yesterday, and calmly testified that both his father and brother had died insane.

With a barely perceptible smile, Burgman also told the District Court jury trying him for treason that in 1938 the American military attache in Berlin had instructed him "to apply for a total mental disability."

Burgman is charged with making a series of treasonous broadcasts during the war under the alias of "Joe Scanlon" from a Berlin shortwave station known as station D-E-B-U-N-K.

Tells of Physical Ailments

On the stand for two hours answering the questions of his attorney, James J. Laughlin, Burgman testified primarily about his mental and physical health. His father died "a psychopath" in an insane asylum in the State of Washington, he said. His brother died in a mental institution in Canada, he said.

During his service in the Army in the first World War, and for eight years thereafter, Burgman said he had suffered from an abscess of the colon.

Burgman said he had suffered "several" heart attacks during the 12 months before Germany declared war on this country, one of them "very severe."

One of these attacks of angina pectoris, Burgman said, came on the night of December 11, 1941, only a few hours after he had been told by embassy officials that Germany had declared war.

Sickness Kept Him in Berlin

This attack confined him to his bed, Burgman testified, so that he was unable to appear at the embassy, as instructed by the military attache, early on December 12. Burgman said his sister-in-law had told the embassy he was too sick to move and had asked for instructions. When he was able to move from his bed on Christmas Day, American Embassy personnel had left, he said.

After that, Burgman said he was forced to seek employment by the German Central Labor Office, on fear of death, and was told to work for the shortwave station as a translator.

Burgman will resume the stand this morning.

Earlier in the day, his 26-year-old son, Thomas, testified that Burgman lived in constant fear of the Gestapo. Thomas, an architecture student who said he was drafted into the German army in 1945, also testified that his father thought the Gestapo agents would blame him for the 1941 flight to Scotland of Deputy Fuehrer Rudolph Hess.

Meanwhile, Representative John B. Bennet (R., Mich.) said yesterday he would demand the deportation of E. V. Sittler, teacher in the Michigan College of Mining and Technology and Burgman's wartime boss. Sittler, who testified that Burgman was "Joe Scanlon," said he had joined the Nazi Party to prevent being evicted from his apartment.

Chart Gives New Pay Rates Of 500,000 Postal Workers

By Jerry Kluttz

The new and official salary rates for the 500,000 postal employes is presented today in a table prepared by the Postoffice Department.

More than 18,000 postal workers here and nearby will benefit under the new postal pay law which the President signed late Friday. This number will be increased by about 7500 soon as the various postoffices in the Washington area hire temporary help for the Christmas rush.

Bad Example Feared If News Gag Wins

If Illegal

PUC Clarifies Rule Barring Telephones

The District Public Utilities Commission has "clarified" a regulation authorizing removal of phones used for an unlawful purpose and will take it back into District Court today.

The regulation, which Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. filed with the PUC last March, was called ambiguous by Judge James W. Morris October 24 and sent back to the PUC for clarification. The section to be clarified was an amendment added to the tariff regulations by the PUC.

The amendment, which the judge felt was not clearly stated, read that in cases where phones were to be removed for illegal use "... the company shall give notice to each subscriber affected . . . of his right to apply to the Public Utilities Commission . . . for a determination of the applicability of the tariff provisions."

Judge Morris found that the last 10 words of the amendment ambiguous, and the PUC yesterday released a revised version of the amendment.

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 1 (AP).—A dangerous national precedent may be set unless Baltimore newspapers succeed in upsetting a gag rule seriously hamstringing full reporting of crime news before it comes into the courts, a Baltimore editor warned today.

"We have won the first round in the State Court of Appeals," said MacLean Patterson, general managing editor of the Baltimore Sun, in describing his paper's fight on "Rule 904." The attorney general of Maryland is now seeking a reversal in the United States Supreme Court, he said.

Patterson, in Fort Worth for the Associated Press Managing Editors Association meeting, said the rule prohibits publication of details of a crime and bans the linking of a crime with the accused, or with persons arrested on suspicion.

It was imposed, he said, by the Supreme Bench of Baltimore, and became an issue in the courts when three Baltimore radio stations violated the ban by reporting details of the murder of a little girl.

The Supreme Bench of Baltimore handed down the rule, Patterson said, in the belief a fair hearing for defendants would be insured without prejudice created by publicity.

But the rule is self-defeating, the youthful news executive added.

Postlude

Orchestra Draws Shout Of Approval

By Paul Hume

Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony lighted a fire under many of their audience last night in Constitution Hall.

The incendiarism took place mainly during a performance of the Sixth Symphony by Dmitri Shostakovich. It was the first playing of this music by the local orchestra. They will play it better in certain minor technical instances the next time they rehearse and program it. But they gave a brilliant account last evening.

It is an unusual work in only three movements. The first is long and sustained and slow. The two closing sections both are fast. Mitchell achieved a remarkable triumph as he built the opener.

It must not be hurried but must not be allowed to droop in the middle.

Comes Off With a Wallop

He drew excellent playing from all his musicians and created an impressive mood. The middle movement is the better of the two fast sections. The finale is a combination of circus parade, the can-can, and the finale to the William Tell Overture, which it most often suggests. It comes off with all the wallop it needs and brought the house to a standing shout of approval.

Benno Moiseiwitch was soloist of the evening in the last of Beethoven's five piano concertos. Moiseiwitch is an unemotional player, allowing music to say what it wants simply by playing the notes as well as possible.

He gave the first movement rhythmic point by excelent accents in both long scales and octave passages. The middle movement sang tenderly and the transition to the finale was delicately managed. The finale seemed routine, but it is certainly a routine piece of writing.

Accompaniment of High Order

The orchestra under Mitchell provided the best kind of accompaniment at all times, save for a bit of slightly "under" playing from the woodwinds in the quietest moments.

The concert opened with a Purcell suite arranged by John Barbirolli. This was rich fare for the prelude. The strings showed real discipline and glowing tone. Vernon Kirkpatrick read the famous English horn solo with style.

The horns were perfect in their rapid entrance but lacked solidity in the middle. But what a treat to hear this great music so well read. Next week: Sir Thomas Beecham in Handel, Mozart, Delius, Brahms and Berlioz.

The Man Who—

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

"He Doesn't Eat a Thing!"

Parents who are worried about how much a child eats or sleeps are very likely to let their concern interfere with their judgment. Mrs. Brennan, for instance, went to her pediatrician and said, "I don't know what I am going to do. I'm sure that Arthur doesn't eat enough to keep him healthy." The doctor suggested that she actually weigh Arthur's food for a few days.

Though it was something of a job, Mrs. Brennan carried it through. When she made her report, her doctor showed her that in terms of actual weight, the Brennan youngster was getting quite enough food for a child of his age, weight and height.

The same method can be applied to other parts of the child's everyday activities. If Roland seems to spend all his time reading the comics, if Priscilla's naps appear to be over almost before they start, or if Marian gives the impression of always dropping things, a simple check on the facts may be the best first step in dealing with the problem. If the results show that there is reason for concern, then we can begin to try to get at causes and do something about them. As likely as not, however, such a check will show that our impressions are faulty. Worry has magnified the situation.

What's the Verdict?

FIRED EMPLOYE

Q. Black was a laborer employed by Hardwood Lumber Co. One of Hardwood's best customers was Speedy Construction Co. One day when Black was unloading lumber, he was severely injured by a negligently-driven truck owned by Speedy Co. His injury is severe, but Speedy Co.'s agent insists he ought to settle for a few hundred dollars, and threatens that if he doesn't settle for a small amount he will cause the Hardwood Co. to fire him. Black sticks to his guns, the Speedy Co. demands that the Hardwood Co. fire him or lose the Speedy Co business, so Black is fired. Has he any action against the Speedy Co. for getting him fired?

A. The defense of the Speedy Co. to a suit by Black for loss of his job would be that since the Hardwood Lumber Co. could fire Black any time it wanted to, for any reason or no reason, he ought not to complain when the Hardwood Co. exercises its right and does fire him. But this overlooks the practical fact that Black would continue to have a job if the Speedy Co. had not put "pressure" on Black's employer in an effort to get a legitimate claim settled cheaply. Where a third party interferes with the contractural relations of two others, with the object of unjustly benefiting the interfering third party, a cause of action arises. Black has such an action against the Speedy Co.—F. L. D.

Partners in Life

We think about our parents and . . . Our sisters and our brothers . . . But do we ever take the time . . . To care for any others? . . . Do we remember all our friends . . . Our neighbors on the street . . . And do we ever think about . . . The strangers whom we meet? . . . Do we consider life at large . . . In sorrow and in pleasure . . . Where everyone must make his way . . . According to his measure? . . . The world was never meant to be . . . A small one of our own . . . Where we may hold our happiness . . . And live our life alone . . . For we are all in partnership . . . And there is no partition . . . Except as each of us may sin . . . And owe a true contrition.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

For Somnambulist, Life Is But a Dream

Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw. observes that habit is certainly a wonderful thing.

It seems that the bus was at a terminal, with the driver standing beside it, stretching his legs and catching a quick smoke.

The fellow with the evening papers under his arm plodded right past the driver, entered the bus, flashed his pass at the empty driver's seat, and proceeded to the rear of the vehicle—completely oblivious to the driver's absence.

PSYCHOLOGIST

There were two sidewalk photographers plying their trade on 14th st. nw., between F and G.

One was about 100 feet beyond the other, and I wondered how he could do any business with his competitor getting first crack at the customers.

But as I watched him work, I realized he had a technique.

A woman who had ignored the first photographer was also about to breeze past the second when I heard him say:

"Ah, that hat. I got you—hat and all."

It worked like a charm. She stopped and signed up for a picture.

OLD-AGE SECURITY PLAN

A news item about Roger Touhy, resident of the Illinois State Penitentiary, casually mentions that he's serving "a life sentence and a 100-year term."

Wonder which he's doing first?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Very pretty, affectionate 3-month-old kitten." (Warfield 5114.)

"Sleek, shiny half-grown black cat; quiet, gentle disposition." (Oliver 3287.)

"We're moving into an apartment this week end and have three little male kittens who will be without a home." (Tuckerman 1079.)

KID STUFF

Carolyn Shapiro of 5605 Suitland rd., Suitland, Md., reports that 2-year-old Joel Berkman of 106 M st. se. calls the V-6 bus: "Bureau of Gravy."

PERSONAL NOTES

Happy Goldthwaite, 440 Harvard st., Norfolk, Va.: The last I heard about Cartoonist Irwin, he was working "out West someplace." I guess he likes the climate out there better than Washington's humidity.

MISCELLANY

Members of the Anteaters Association are looking forward to November 15, which is the date of their first wild game lunch of the season. Lunches will be held each Tuesday through December 13, at the Zoo Restaurant. Reservations may be made by calling Columbia 3231 . . . Mrs. William T. Stockton, jr., of 5126 S. 11th st., Arlington, Va., says if you'll settle for a snack bar instead of wild game lunches, you're invited to the Trinity Episcopal Church Bazaar (Columbia Pike and S. Wayne st., Arlington; 4 to 9 p. m. today and 11 a. m. to 8 p. m. tomorrow). In addition to the eats they'll have two clowns, a shooting gallery, games and gifts . . . Peggy Robinson of 225 Atlantic st. se. hates to ruin a good story but she points out that WJPR of Greenville, Miss., no longer lives up to its "We Just Play Records" slogan, and has joined the Mutual Broadcasting System . . . Mrs. Forrest E. Daugherty of 2801 Pennsylvania ave. se. invites us to help the Police Wives' Club celebrate its first anniversary with an evening of dancing Friday, from 9:30 p. m. until 1 a. m. The place is the New Melody Ballroom, 34th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne., and tickets cost $1.20 a copy, including tax . . . Speaking of dancing, Mrs. Max Feldman of 2815 Hillcrest dr. se. will be glad to sell you a couple of tickets for the Randle Highlands P.-T.A. Square Dance to be held in the Anacostia High School gym Saturday, from 8 to 11 p. m. Lots of food, round and square dancing, and movies for the young'uns. Students, 25 cents; graybeards, 75 cents . . . Either Mrs. H. W. Seaman of 118 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, Md., or Mrs. J. M. Curtis of 4608 Brookview dr., Westhaven, Md., will be glad to have your square dancing business Friday night, too (9 to midnight, Chevy Chase Women's Club, 7431 Connecticut ave. nw., tickets $1). Sponsor is the Gamma Phi Beta Washington Alumnae Chapter. . . They're well known for the funds they've raised for the Barney Neighborhood House, but their latest accomplishment is even more laudable. They've just run me plumb out of space and forced me to sign off for the day.

Listen to the District Line on the air Monday through Friday at 1:30 p. m., over WRC.

Merry Menagerie—By Walt Disney

"It was his frank, open face that endeared him to me!"

Crosswind landing gear, newly developed for airplanes, enables the pilot to land into the wind even when the wind is at an angle to the runway, says Carl Markwith in the National Geographic Magazine. (July, 1949) A caster-like device inside the wheels brings them automatically into line with the runway when they touch the ground.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Sherman Was Forrestal Favorite

By Drew Pearson

Here's the dope on Admiral Forrest Sherman, the man who favored unification:

He was Forrestal's favorite. Forrestal had him earmarked for Chief of Naval Operations, considered him the broadest military man he had ever known. In fact, Forrestal sent Sherman to the Mediterranean with the idea of replacing Admiral Richard Conolly as fleet commander for Europe. But Conolly begged to stay on, and Forrestal gave in, expecting to make the transfer later.

Sherman

Sherman and Conolly have never got along since, Conolly being an old-line, unimaginative, battleship admiral. Sherman is just the opposite—alert, aggressive, with his eyes ahead.

Sherman is short, tanned, ruddy with straight gray hair. He wears glasses at his desk. He was a champion fencer at Annapolis, but his favorite exercise now is walking.

Though he has a dynamic mind, Sherman's personality falls short of Admiral Halsey's. He doesn't play golf or tennis, but reads avidly for recreation. He prefers weighty works, such as the London Economist.

Sherman won the complete respect of Gen. Lauris Norstad while writing the Unification Act.

Note—Sherman was ready to testify with the other admirals on Capitol Hill. He flew into town, and had his statement all ready. But Secretary of Defense Johnson already had him in mind for Chief of Naval Operations, didn't want him to get splattered with mud. So Sherman was kept in the shadow, never took the stand.

War Clouds

Atomic-war preparations in Britain have been intensified since news of the Russian A-bomb. London would be the first object of attack. Therefore the British army has ordered 500,000 vest-pocket Geiger counters to detect radioactivity. Air-raid wardens would use them to report on what parts of the city are radioactive . . . Chief result of the American ambassadorial conference in London was to appoint "Chip" Bohlen, ace expert on Russia, to mastermind United States strategy behind the Iron Curtain . . . Tito's chief trouble in defending Yugoslavia is ammunition. Yugoslavia's artillery, guns and tanks were supplied by the Soviet, so now Tito can't get spare parts and ammunition . . . The Yugoslavs are dickering with the Italians to manufacture ammunition in northern Italy. And it was only a short time ago the two countries were rowing over Trieste!

Labor-Go-Round

Truman will not reappoint J. Copeland Gray to the National Labor Relations Board when his term expires this year. Labor is down on him . . . Labor leaders now figure if they can't repeal the Taft-Hartley Act, the best tactic is to pressure for pro-labor men on the NLRB . . . Usually John L. Lewis has made the mine operators sweat. Now the operators are letting John sweat. He has been desperately anxious to settle the coal strike . . . Ben Fairless, president of U. S. Steel and the son of a coal miner, two weeks ago urged his company executives to sign a one-year contract with the union along the lines recommended by the President's fact-finding board.

Patient Cy Ching

Unsung hero of the steel negotiations was long, lanky Cy Ching, who, at the age of 71, resigned from the U. S. Rubber Co. two years ago to help his country as a labor conciliator.

Ching's patience is that of Job's. All week long, hour after hour, day after day, like a broken phonograph record, he listened to the same company arguments that workers must contribute to the pension fund.

"But your captive coal mines have a noncontributory agreement with John L. Lewis," Ching told U. S. Steel Vice President John Stephens.

"Yes, and look what happened to Lewis's pension fund," Stephens replied. "It's been bankrupted because it never was set up on a sound, actuarial basis in the first place. We want to establish a sound pension plan for U. S. Steel employes."

So it went—sometimes into the night.
